The Street Letter Boxes.

The Postmaster has placed the street letter boxes on lamp posts as follows: One at Tupper's corner, near Executive Mansion; one near Jordan Womble's, intersection of Hargett and Swain streets; one at Maj Winder's corner; one at Mr. White's corner, between Mr. Crowder's and Daf and Dumb Asylum; one at Mr. West's corner, Hillsboro street; and one in front of National Hotel. The messenger to collect the letters deposited in these boxes will begin his rounds to-day. This disposes of the half-dozen boxes allowed. They will prove a great convenience, and those who have letters to pust will find themselves saved long walks. The letters will be collected twice each day, by a special messenger from the post office, and by depositing il em at the proper time they will be dep tched a ways as designed. The number of boxes will perhaps be increased to a dozen, if they prove such a public convenience -s is expected.

Fashionable Marriage. From the Phil idelphia Times The fashionable event in Booklyn on the 13th was the marriage of Erastus Corning, Jr., of Albany, to Miss Grace Schenck, daughter of the Rev. Noah Hunt Schenck, of St. Ann's on the Heights. The chimes of St. Ann's rang wedding melodies while the throng was moving into church. The church was in gay dress. Silken stand-- Miss Genevieve Rogers is said to ards, banners and gonfalons, painted The Christmas greens remained about the altar, and the pillars were trimmed with fresh cut flowers and the fragrance of a flower garden filled the interior of the building. A son of Senator Pendleton was one of the ushers. The white-robed bishops, Doane of Albany, and Littlejohn, of Brooklyn, and the assistant pastor of St. Ann's appeared in the chancel and took seats. The wedding party entered the church just as the bells in the tower struck noon. True to the English style of wedding now popular among Episcopalians, the groom was not with the bridal party, but he stepped out of the rector's room just as the bridesmaid's white bonnets appeared at the door. Walking forward, closely followed by his chief groomsman, Horatio Seymour, Jr., he bus county, N. C., but giving no post met his bride as she neared the altar.
