Sins Against Health.

SERMON BY REV. DR. THOS. E. SKIN

There are a good many reasons which may help to explain what is, at fiirst sight, the extraordinary fact that bodily health is only just coming to take a first place among the objects of a reasonable man's interest. Or course the methods of healing sickness have always attracted a lurge measure of attention, because downright sickness to welcome the many members and is disabling in a way that is too plain and irresistable to be overlooked. Everybody will do his best to get rid of pain when it is on him. But the conception of health is something much more than the absence of a prostrating or umistakable disagreeable malady is considerably slower in making way. being "the state in which existence itself is felt to be an enjoyment in which all simple and natural pleasures are appreciated, and the little every day auxieties of our business sit lightly upon us," his definition seems a more common place trueism. that health is anything short of this. It is rather startng to think how few persons one knows who do not habitually sacrifice health for some other advantage confessedly worth less having. And not the least startling thing is that the few who have had the sense to make health really thier first aim are not seldom the dullest blockheads in the choice of all other aims. At the universities, for example, and among the best sets of young m n in the larger cities, the men of muscle are not com monly the men of brain. There are more exceptions than there used to be, it is true; but the hard reading man as
