A young people's party at the white house has been promised by Mrs. Hayes, but she does not wish to give it until the new set of china, which has been manufactured by the Haviland company, at Limoges, France, has been received. It is said to be very beautiful in design and coloring, and the pieces for each course of the dinner-service are different in shape and decoration. Mrs. Hayes has determined that the state dinners at the white house shal be as attractive as they used to be when each place was encircled by eight elegant wine-glasses of different sizes. In their places will be coffee and tea cups, with they vaces for
