

REED'S INDIRECTION

THE BAG OF ENGINEER JOE HAGUE TAGGED TO HIS CARE HERE FROM THE WEST.

FULL LIST OF DISCHARGED MEN.

With Their Ages, Terms of Service, Wages and Other Details--Bounced Without Notice, and Most of Them Were Strong, Experienced Men With Wives and Little Children--Five Western Men Thus Far Put On--Three Engineers at Abbeville, One Brakeman at Portsmouth, and a Boss-Wrecker Here.

Master Mechanic, Superintendent of Motive Power and Machinery of the S. A. L., W. T. Reed, formerly of Montreal, later of St. Paul, now of Raleigh, must have read the stories that appeared a few days ago in the News and Observer concerning his underground importation to this city of Western men intended to take the places of competent Southern men now at work on the road.

For some of them, at least, as will appear later on, have been restored to their positions; but from whatever cause their restoration took place, it is a matter of some curiosity to the public to know just how much shoveling out Manager Reed has done. Therefore, with some labor, the News and Observer has obtained names and other pertinent details, a complete list of which will appear below.

It will be remembered that Manager Reed has said that he would keep men already at work where they were competent. The public can judge whether most of those in the list are competent or not. But this is not all. Manager Reed has been acting in a very strange way with the workmen on the road in his professions. For he professed not to have known anything of the Western men who came here, and some of whom are here now. But let the interview with him by a reporter of this paper last Thursday night speak for itself. If it be believed by this people that Manager Reed is not acting frankly with them, it may as well be said to Vice-President St. John now as at any other time that Manager Reed may not be the most valuable man he could get for the place of Mr. McGlenn, which he took.

These statements are made in order to put forward this fact plainly: that the Raleigh and Gaston road per se is more essentially a Raleigh road than any other, and that the people in North Carolina do not want to see what has become to be almost a part of them handled in a way that is not for the best interests of public and road. So that it is merely for the upholding of the road that this paper has alluded to the displacement of home men.

Mr. Reed has not been frank with the people.

Now here is the interview above referred to:

"He said he had never put a single new man on the road here one he believed, who also, he believed, was a Western man, but who had 'drifted in there promiscuously'."

"Asked as to the 'bouncing' of the score or more men lately from the Raleigh force, he said that no one had been put in their places, and that they had been discharged for good cause, because they were not competent; that, as to Mr. Albert Johnson, the road could not afford to pay men eighty-five years old to work for it. That in the case of the others, they were 'let off' because they were not competent to do the work as he wanted it done; that he had no preference for Western men per se, that on the contrary he proposed to take the men hereabout by preference where they were competent; that there was no cause for uneasiness among these men; everything would be all right; that they were crying out before they were hurt. Mr. Reed was running at such delightful speed that by way of blowing down brakes on him, I suggested that it had been rumored that yesterday morning, six workmen from the West, engineers, had invaded the city; had come to his office during his interview with the Abbeville men, had been given an appointment with him at 10 o'clock this morning, and how about all that?"

"Well," said Mr. Reed, "I never saw any of the mythical Western men, don't know anything about them, couldn't have any engagement with them to-morrow morning at 10 because I am going to Norfolk in the morning."

Now Mr. Reed is back from Portsmouth, and may or may not have read the story of Hambrecht, who said he and Hague and Spearman had worked for Reed for several years, and Spearman as the man he saw in the lobby before the breath of the interview had scarcely passed his lips, and Spearman came with Hague, Joe Hague.

Does Mr. Reed know Joe Hague, or is the mythical, or did he never hear of him, or if so, did he prefer not to let the fact be known. Why all this secrecy? There was nothing to keep secret; but there is one thing not a secret, and that was that competent men here did not like any organized movement to bring in a sneak body of men to displace them from places that had been the bread winning source for years for their little homes. Then, too, they were 'bounced' ruthlessly without notice, and without any assignment of reasonable cause. Then in their babies eyes they saw the strange light of hunger, and there was a cry of indignant distress along the line.

But about Joe Hague. Will Manager Reed deny that Joe Hague's bag was expressed here from the West in care of W. T. Reed?

He will not deny it, for the proof of the tag is in the possession of the reporter of this paper.

Now Mr. Reed may know more about Joe Hague than he thought.

And in having said all this, no question is made of the right of Mr. Reed to have Joe Hague, Engineer, to come here with his knowledge, nor Spearman nor any other proper man, and for the purpose of taking a place, too, though that, when a competent man is displaced thereby, is a policy which Mr. St. John may find to be against good policy. But the question is distinctly made that such indirectness of method has not commended the career here of Mr. Reed to this people and, therefore, his actions have been hurtful to the interest of a road whose prosperity the people along its line have deeply at heart.

The following is a list of the men who have been displaced since the arrival of Mr. Reed and by him:

The foundry was closed on the last Saturday of March, letting off five moulders, two core-makers, one cupola attendant and four helpers.

On that day, Foreman James McDougall went, 52 years of age, been with the company since 1874. Mr. McDougall was notified by Master Mechanic Sherman Shaw who himself was then bounced. Mr. Shaw is 31 years old, and has a wife dependent upon him, and said that as late as Friday night no one knew anything of the "let off" to be sprung. McDougall got $2.75 per day and had a wife and six children.

J. T. Nottingham, brass-moulder, age 56, wages $2.50, with the road 25 years, wife and six children.

Moulder H. F. Hicks, 35 years old, wages $2.40, with the road 7 years, wife and three children.

Moulder W. H. Riggan, age 33, wages $2.20, with the road 6 years, wife and two children.

Moulder C. O. Caw, age 25, wages $1.50, with the road four years, began as apprentice boy, wife.

Core-maker Henry St. Sing, age 42, wages $1.25, with the road twenty-six years, wife and three children.

Core-maker Peter Watkins, age 35, wages $1.25, with the road ten years, wife and three children. Mr. Watkins has been reinstated as laborer.

Core-maker Wm. Watkins, age 33, wages $1.25, with the road seven years, wife and three children. Mr. Watkins was reinstated and changed places with Wm. Schilling.

Painter Wm. Schilling, dropped and put back in Watkins's place. Schilling had been with the road five years and had a wife and one child.

Round-house machinist Henry Clay Johnson, age 45, wages $2.50, with the company thirty years, wife and no children.

D. T. Bunch, age sixty, wages $2.25, with the company twenty-nine years, wife and two children and grandchildren all at his house. That completes the foundry.

Then come: Chas. Morris (two days notice). Foreman Bishop, carpenter, age thirty-five, with the company six years, wife and children.

Thomas King, car-greaser, age twenty-one, wages $1.50, with the company ten years, single.

"Judge" Wilton, coach-trimmer, seventy-two, wages $2.00, with the road thirty years, no family.

There were several others who had their pay cut and are still working for the company.

Foreman Bishop, age twenty-three, wages $2.25, with the road, six years, no family. Mr. Bishop was reinstated on Monday last.

George Coffin, age eighty-four, wages $1.00, with the road twenty years, wife, children and grandchildren.

Three negro laborers at 75 cents per day.

Let Off on April 1st.

T. L. Shaw, age 61, $75 per month, with the road 22 years, wife, children and grandchildren. Mr. Shaw was first cut $2.00 per day, and then let off.

G. L. Womble, (who is still at work on out wages) gave notice to Mr. Shaw that he would have no further use for him, with no notice.

Sam Hunter, round-house carpenter, age 64, wages $2.25, with the company 22 years, children and grandchildren.

Round-house Fireman Eaves, still there and promoted.

Albert Johnson, assistant in tool-room, age 85, wages $1.00, helped lay the foundation of the shops, ran the first engine over the road, with the road 52 years, wife, children and grandchildren.

"Bounced" in Abbeville.

J. H. Hunter, foreman blacksmith shop, age 31, wages $2.75, with the road 15 years, 3 hours' notice, wife and two children, discharged last Friday week.

Edward Parker, age 20, wages $1.00, with the road 3 years, single, dismissed by time-keeper Corne five minutes before the whistle blew, without notice.

Henry Brooks, age 23, wages $1.00, with the company 3 years, single, five minutes notice.

Western Men Put On.

One, the wrecking boss now in the Raleigh shops; the other on trucks in Portsmouth.

At Abbeville, 3 engineers from the West, one running regularly now, and the other two learning the road.

Last and greatest, Master Mechanic McGlenn, who had been a distinguished member of the road's force since 1874 and of which services a full sketch will appear later.

Mr. W. T. Reed has the place of Mr. McGlenn.

Interview With General Manager Winder--What the Other Side Claim.

Atlanta Journal.

that they do such a small volume of this business with the Seaboard that it amounts practically to nothing, as far as the decision is concerned. This is the view Mr. Carroll Payne takes of the matter. The Seaboard people, on the other hand, claim that the position of the court is that the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis cannot be forced into a contract with the Seaboard; but that if they contract with other roads on through business they must extend the same arrangements to the Seaboard.
