THE SOLEMN FUNERAL

REMAINS OF THE LATE SECRETARY OF STATE CARRIED TO HIS FORMER HOME.

SERVICES AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

Bishop Hurst, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, conducts the impressive ceremonies.—The President, Mrs. Cleveland, the Diplomatic Corps in the East Room.—The Funeral Train to be Run Straight Through to Chicago Without Stops.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29.—No brighter sun could have shone than that which shed its rays over the military pageant, which accompanied the funeral procession of Secretary Gresham this morning. No more imposing spectacle has been witnessed since the last Presidential inauguration, though the sadness of the occasion naturally dimmed its lustre, and the crowds were muted and reverent.

At 9:30 a. m., the body, which had lain in state last evening in the parlor of the apartment in the Arlington annex which the Secretary had occupied during life, was removed from the resting place to the great East Room of the White House. It was preceded by such a tribute of flowers as even Washington, the city of flowers, has seldom witnessed. The arrangements awaited the arrival of the President and his Cabinet, who came with military promptitude. The military forces consisted of four troops of the sixth cavalry from Fort Myer, Va., five companies of artillery from the Washington Barracks, and the Marine corps under Heywood.

The Late Secretary.

The remains reached the Executive Mansion at 9:40 o'clock. Mrs. Gresham was too ill to accompany them. As the casket left the hotel the President and his cabinet formed in double column as a guard of honor on each side. The body bearers were eight sergeants of the 4th Artillery. They were commanded by Captain Charles B. Hall of the 19th Infantry.

The members of the family who accompanied the cortege to the White House were the dead Secretary's only son, Otto Gresham, his sister, Mrs. Andrews and her husband, and Captain and Mrs. Fuller, the latter being Mrs. Gresham's niece.

When the President and cabinet stepped within the portico of the White House, they again formed in double line between which the casket, followed by the members of the family, passed.

Those who were to take part in the brief and simple funeral services assembled in the East Room. The Japanese Minister, Mr. Kurino, and his suite were the first to arrive, and they were seated in the space devoted to the Diplomatic corps at the foot of the casket. About half past nine o'clock the driveway in front of the east entrance to the Mansion was thronged with the carriages of the arrivals, and by the time the casket reached the White House every seat except those reserved for the President and Cabinet, was filled.

It was ten minutes of ten o'clock when the funeral party reached the White House, and the short wait until the services began was most impressive. At one end of the room, made into a living garden by its palms and oleanders and other growing plants, was the casket, surrounded by the many tributes of friends and associates of the late Secretary. Around it was gathered representatives of the foreign nations with which the United States maintains diplomatic relations, nearly all in uniforms of brilliant hue, marked and alashed with thick bands of gold lace. Prominent among these were three of the four Ambassadors accredited to the United States and with them were their wives.

The Justices of the Supreme Court sat at the side of the coffin opposite and facing the Ambassadors. The Supreme Court circle was composed of Chief Justice and Mrs. Fuller, Justice Shiras, Justice Field, Justice and Mrs. Gray. Others present were Senators Gray, Morgan and Stewart, Assistant Secretaries Hamlin and Wike, of the Treasury; McAdoo, of the Navy; Doe, of the War Department; Adee and Rookhill, and every official and employe of the State Department; Comptroller Eckels, and the Bureau Chiefs of the War and Navy Departments, all in their uniforms as Army and Navy officers.

Exactly at 10 o'clock the services began. A minute or two before that hour Col. John M. Wilson, Master of Ceremonies, notified the President that all was ready, and then led the way from the Blue Room to the East Room. Immediately behind him came the President with Mrs. Cleveland leaning on his arm, becomingly attired in a mourning gown of crepon. The members of the Cabinet and their ladies followed in the order of their official precedence, Secretary and Mrs. Carlisle, Secretary and Mrs. Lamont, Attorney General and Mrs. Olney, Postmaster General and Mrs. Wilson, Secretary and Mrs. Morton, with Secretary Herbert, Secretary Smith and Acting Secretary Uhl bringing up the rear. The Presidential party was seated at the head of the casket and the services began.

In the adjoining green room the members of the Gresham family were seated. With great impressiveness Bishop Hurst began the funeral service, which was conducted according to the manner of the Methodist Episcopal Church. "I am the resurrection and the life," he began, and all through all the chapters of the Scriptures assigned for such solemn occasions. His clear tones could be heard in every part of the large room. When he had concluded a quartette of male voices composed of Messrs. Mosher, Morsell, Kaiser and Hoover, rendered "Lead Kindly Light," and then Bishop Hurst concluded the simple ceremonies by reading the prayers for the dead. When he had spoken the last words he turned to his audience and invited them to view the remains of the dead Secretary, and as the people arose to take advantage of the invitation the President and Mrs. Cleveland withdrew, followed by the Cabinet party. Nearly all present passed around the casket, which was not closed until the last person who so desired had viewed the remains.

At 11 o'clock the services were concluded and the last look at the dead Secretary taken.

The hearse drove up and a bugle call from the avenue signalled the troops to fall into line.

The casket, carried by eight Sergeants of Marines, was borne to the hearse. It was strewn with flowers.

Bishop Hurst, the officiating clergyman, followed the remains. Shortly afterwards the President and Mrs. Cleveland appeared; after them came all who had witnessed the ceremony in the East Room.

The carriages left by the western driveway and took places in the procession, which then moved down Pennsylvania Avenue to the Baltimore and Ohio station.

The solemn march down the Avenue to the railroad station was most impressive. All the executive departments were closed out of respect to the dead Secretary, and the Avenue down which the procession passed was lined with spectators.

The order of march was this: Captain Austin and a squad of mounted police.

Sixth Cavalry band.

Troops B, E and G, of the 6th Cavalry, Col. G. S. Gordon commanding.

Gen. Ruger and his staff.

Three batteries of the 4th Artillery and one of the third artillery, Col. Closson commanding.

Marine Band.

The Marine battalion, Col. Heywood commanding.

The family of the dead Secretary did not accompany the procession but drove straight to the station from the hotel.

The first carriage after the military contained the persons who had attended Mr. Gresham at his illness. These preceded the hearse, after which came Bishop Hurst. The remaining carriages in their order were filled by President and Mrs. Cleveland, Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Uhl, Secretary and Mrs. Lamont, Attorney General and Mrs. Olney, Postmaster General and Mrs. Wilson, Secretaries Herbert and Smith, whose families are absent from the city, Secretary and Miss Morton, and other personal friends in diplomatic and private life of Mr. and Mrs. Gresham.

When the head of the procession reached the main entrance to the station, the cavalry drew up in line and permitted the carriages to pass between them. It was almost noon when the President and Cabinet reached the depot and embarked. Mr. Cleveland plainly showed the effect of his recent illness. His face was flushed and heated and as he stood with bared head, the perspiration streamed down his face.

Although nothing had been said about it, it was noticed that Dr. O'Reilly attended the President and went to Chicago with the party. It was given out that this was done on Mrs. Gresham's account, but it is believed that the condition of the President himself had as much to do with the presence of the Doctor as anything else. In addition to Minister Romero, of Mexico, Minister Mendonca, of Brazil, also formed one of the funeral escort. No representatives of the press were permitted on board the train.

The train pulled out of the station at exactly fourteen minutes after 12 o'clock and will run as the second section of train No. 5, which leaves Washington at 11:25 a. m. It was about forty-five minutes behind the regular train.

The train will reach Pittsburg at about 9:15 to night and is due to reach Chicago to-morrow morning. No stops will be made along the route except such as are absolutely necessary for the proper running of the train.

Bishop Rondthaler, of the Moravian church, accepted the window for the trustees in a splendid and appropriate address.

Mrs. Vance, together with a large number of other friends and admirers of the beloved Senator, witnessed the interesting and impressive ceremonies.

$107,000,000

THE IMMENSE CAPITAL NOW INVESTED IN SOUTHERN COTTON MILLS.

$12,000,000 IN PROJECTED MILLS.

Prominent New Englanders Acknowledge the South's Superior Advantages for Cotton Manufacture.—The Immense Increase in Manufactures in Recent Years.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 29.—The special cotton mill edition of the Manufacturer's Record of this week shows that amount of capital invested in Southern cotton mills increased from $21,900,000 in 1880 and $61,100,000 in 1890, to $107,000,000 at present, while about $12,000,000 additional will be spent in the construction of the mills now building and projected. In 1880 the South had 667,000 spindles, in 1891, 1,700,000 spindles, and at the present time 3,000,000 spindles, while the mills under construction will add 500,000 more, or a total of 3,500,000 spindles, thus doubling the entire cotton mill business of the South since 1890. A number of leading New England experts give their views upon the cotton manufacturing advantages of the Southern States. Mr. D. M. Thompson, President of the Corless Engine Company of Providence, and for 12 years manager of the largest mill corporation in New England, running over 420,000 spindles, says of the South's cotton mill facilities: "Years ago after a careful consideration I became fully convinced that the South possessed superior advantages for the manufacture of cotton, years and course goods. I have since had no occasion to change the opinion then formed. I have great faith in the possibilities of the South. I believe it is and will long continue a profitable field for investment in the manufacture of cotton. I believe there is an almost illimitable field for the extension of our cotton manufacturing in this country and with the extension into finer numbers of yarn and higher grade of fabrics in the North and with the opening of new markets through the agency of the South's superior advantages, a vastly larger product of coarse goods can be made. I believe that the extension of the manufacture in the South should be encouraged by all people. It will establish a bond of interest between New England, the Middle States and the South, which will be of great good to the interests of the nation and in the near future will be recognized in the industrial and political arena of our country as a factor of national importance."

Mr. C. B. Makepeace, a leading New England cotton mill engineer, says: "The next ten years will show a great increase in the number of spindles in this country, even including the finer numbers, will be in the Southern States, and it is an indisputable fact that the average number of yarns spun in the South has been raised from coarser to finer counts more rapidly than has been the tendency in this direction in New England. The phenomenal success of some mills erected in the South during the last four years, which are making a finer grade of goods than has been the custom in that section, will cause others to change to finer goods. It is nothing more than natural that the large percentage of the increase in spindles in this country during the years to come should be at advantageous points for manufacturing, situated near the point where the cotton is grown, than that the iron industry of this country should center somewhere near where all the raw materials for the making of iron are found."

FIRE-EATING FORAKER TRIUMPHANT.

Ohio State Republican Machinery Passes From the Hands of McKinley.

ZANESVILLE, Ohio, May 29.—Victors and vanquished came together again this morning in Memorial Hall, with the intention of finishing up the work of the Republican State Convention with dispatch, to the end that the delegates and visitors might return to their respective localities in time for participation in the exercises of decoration day.

Senator Sherman was prompt in opening proceedings at 9 o'clock, and the delegates were equally prompt in responding to his call for order. Ex-Secretary Foster was first introduced to submit the platform and resolutions, which were hurriedly read and as quickly adopted, much applause being bestowed upon the naming of McKinley as a candidate for the Presidency, and of Foraker for the next Senatorship.

The nominations for Lieutenant Governor were next on the docket. Only one name, that of A. W. Jones, of Youngstown, was submitted and his selection was made by acclamation.

W. J. Gilbert, of Caldwell, was nominated for Auditor of State, Judge Minshall for Supreme Judge, Josiah B. Allen, of Athens, for Clerk of the Supreme Court.

The net result of the defeat of Nash is to dispossess Governor McKinley and his friends of the control of the State political machinery after January next, and to make ex-Governor Foraker the party dictator of the State. It likewise settles the fact that the Ohio delegation to the next Republican Presidential convention will contain at least two anti-McKinleyites-at-large in the person of Gen. Asa Bushnell, who will then wear the title of Governor, and ex-Governor Foraker, who will probably be alluded to as "Senator-elect."

But little interest was taken in to-day's proceedings as it was evident that the Foraker slate would go through.

The convention began to suffer from the heat and to get disorderly by the time the nominations for Attorney General were reached and every attempt at a speech was hawled down.

Samuel J. Campbell, of Jefferson, was nominated for State Treasurer on the third ballot.

F. P. Libarger, of Coshocton, was re-nominated by acclamation for member of the board of public works, and at 2:05 o'clock the Convention adjourned sine die.

"SIR VISTO" WINS THE DERBY.

Lord Rosebery's Stable Again Bears Off the Blue Ribbon.

LONDON, May 29.—Lord Rosebery's Sir Visto won the Derby, T. Cannon's Curzon second, and Sir J. Blundell Maple's Kirkcoulmeith.

The Salvation Army brigade arrived at Epsom this morning and pitched a large tent, from which they handed out tracts and leaflets announcing that they would pursue anti-sin campaign between the races, remaining over at night to resume their labors on the occasion of the Oaks on Friday.

Sir Visto finished three-quarters of a length ahead of Curzon, and there was half a length between the latter and Kirk Coulmeith. Solaro was a good fourth. Time, 2:43 2-5.

Chibiabos led until the horses were descending the hill, when The Brook pulled up and had a slight lead for a few strides. Entering the straight Beckhampton took up the running, followed by Curzon, but inside the straight distance Sir Visto came with a rush and landed a winner.

The crowd was the greatest that has ever attended a Derby since 1889, when the race was won by the Duke of Portland's Donovan.

The weather was perfect in respect of sunshine, but it was intensely warm. The toilets displayed by the prominent society ladies present were superb.
