THE HON. CHARLES R. KINNEY

Leader of The Albemarle Bar From 1825 to 1845.

(From the Wake Forest Student.) "The world has never known its great-metry of nature's workmanship. of an athlete. His arms were muscular, and of nervous temperament-delighted in nimble out-door sports—was a spirited horseman, and was master of feats of horsemanship that were unequaled by his fellows. Nature had east him in a mould that called for six feet, but an accident in infancy had reduced it to five feet seven inches in height. Nature made him an Apollo. His voice was an Aeolian harp, and its strings were tuned to all the notes of human passion, from the melting moods of tender charity to the alto notes of the storm king's wrath.

Such is a photograph of the personal aspect and outline of Charles R. Kinney, who for twenty years-from 1825 to 1845 -after an unsuccessful struggle with the surging wave of adverse fate, rose by an apparent accident upon the crest of the wave, and for over twenty years there held sway, almost without a peer or a parallel, in the Albemarle section of North Carolina.

Born and reared in Connecticut-arrived at the age of manhood after obtaining a classical education in the primary schools of that educational State, he entered upon a mercantile life in the town of his nativity; but Providence had other work for him to do, in a distant section, among strangers, a work from which he was not to be diverted by the misfor tunes of childhood and age. He failed in merchandise. While a merchant he had married, and when a broken merchant he had under his tender care a wife and infant child. In his anxiety he thought of a brother who had come South to Louisiana some years before and from New Orleans had gone to Mobile. Alabama, and was a lawyer there. His name was Asa Kinnie. In the changes of a chequered life, his name had become changed from Kinney, in Connecticut, to Kinnie, in New Orleans; but they recognized and kept up their

On his way to Mobile, Charles R. Kinney got as far as Norfolk, Va., and was sitting in the hotel where he stopped. and a gentleman from Camden county, N. C., by the name of Noah Gregory came in, and they being alone, got in a conversation, when young Kinney told him he was on his way to Mobile, Ala., but was a stranger in Norfolk, and had exhausted his means of travel. Mr. Gregory offered him a place as private teacher to his children in Camden county, He accepted the position and came out to Camden county the next day.

He came over to Elizabeth City, occasionally, in times of leisure, and formed the acquaintane there of John L. Bailey, a leading lawyer, and afterwards a dis tinguished judge of the Superior court of law and equity of the State of North Carolina, and Mr. Bailey proposed to him to study law in his office. The offer was accepted and then commenced a friendship that lasted until death. Charles R. Kinney became the fast friend of John L. Bailey, and it was to the kindness and aid of that good man that Charles R. Kinney was enabled to attend the courts of his small circuit, after he came to Elizabeth City to live. Here and there it was that Mr. Kinney began the ascent of that steep where fame presides—a steep which he did not ascend, but after trials and struggles before which anyone would have fallen in despair, but one who was clothed by the Deity with the wreath of the im-

About 1825, Mr. Kinney waxed strong in professional fame and practice. He made friends on his circuit of courts, and was recognized as a charming conversationalist. It is within living memory that ambitious mothers in the town of Edenton kept their children up beyoud bed time to hear him talk, and to be improved by his conversation when visit was expected from Charles R. Kinney. And yet charming and entertaining as he was as a grave conversationalist, he was an utter failure in the role of anecdote, and he, apparently, was unconscious of the defect.

Mr. Kinney once met Hamilton C Jones at the Supreme court in Raleigh, and heard him tell his story of Cousin Sallie Dillard. At the next term of the Circuit court he told the brethren of the bar that he had a treat for them of a story he heard in Raleigh, which he would repeat to them when they had leisure. At Gates court, after supper, the lawyers were assembled in the sit-ting room of the hotel, and Mr. Kinney made good his promise. He looked around to see that all were present, when the court scene of the verbose witness who couldn't testify as to a fight at "Captain Rice's," unless he began at the beginning, and when interrupted tried to begin anew at "Captain Rice, he gin a treat." The judge constopped him, and orstantly stopped him, and or-dered him to tell about the affray at Captain Rices; and the witness as constantly commenced his testimony with, "And Captain Rice, he gin a treat." The lawyers around were enjoying the double treat of the persishigh-bred, rich, and a born leader of By Pulaski Cowper and R. B. Creecy. young men. The young men of Elizabeth City bowed at his beck, and readily did his bidding. Kinney was not of est men."

Kinney and laughed at him. leader and a man of mark, but distinc-

that make of man. No toady was in Charles R. Kinney, the subject of this his composition. Shephard finding he sketch, was trained and hardened from would not fall into the procession of his infancy in the furnace of adverse for-tune. When a child he fell from his unleashed his agents of irritation. Kinnurse's arms and was deformed for life. ney was ridiculed, denounced, insulted-That fall left him with a hump between his personal infirmities derided-his "vohis shoulders, which marred the sym- ciferous devotions" ridiculed. He was His held up to public and private scorn as head was a dome of thought, but was not posed upon his shoulders. His shoulders were bread, strong and capather the men. A fictitious public sentiment ally some pivotal case on which his sucble of the strenuous work and endurance, was created against him, and he was cess turns, and which is the stepping surrounded wiht a cordon of social fire long and disproportioned to the upper that made his life a foiretaste of the part of his person. He was alert, active very infernl regions. Criminations and recrimination, threat and defiance, street encounters without much damage, publications and counter publicationschallenges to mortal combat given and declined-repeated and accepted with protests of disapproval, all followed. The grave and quiet citizenship was with Mr. Kinney; the young Hotspurs and aggressive citizenship ardently did the dictate of Shephard. The street corners were black with posters pro and From the character of the contest con. ants Kinney was on the defensive. To the charge that his family nest in Connecticut was low and foul, he replied with fiery indignation: "She who bore he said, "died ere I had learned to lisp a mother's name. My father yet lives, old and venerable. He never had the honor of sending or accepting a challenge. Ere he had reached the threshold of manhood he bared his bosom to the battle's rage in the eventful struggle that separated the American colonies

Fowlks slept on the ground the night be-fore. Collins and Henderson slept late, or were otherwise delayed; and while on the way to the ground were arrested by a constable and a justice of the peace, and all bound over to keep the peace. All this historic fight in the District produced but one sound fruit, a drama, entitled, "War Without Fighting," written by Charles R. Kinney, and credited to an Irish schoolmaster at Camden court house. It was a literary produc-tion of decided merit, and it is much to be regretted that it cannot now be found. The Dramatis Personae were all as signed names. Kinney was "Soberly," Shepard was "Captain Bluster," Wilson "Sergeant Gab," which are all that have not passed from memory. When Mr. Kinney fought through the "War Without Fighting," he was a briefless lawyer feeding on the scant crumbs that fell from the table of the professional Dives.

But what is bred in the bone is bound to come out in the flesh, saith the proverb. In the life of the successful law-yer, if closely observed, there is generstone that leads on to fortune. Mr. Kinney was no exception. His pivotal case in the lower counties was State vs John Chittim, charged with being an accessory before the fact, in the murder of Joseph Lindsey of Currituck county. Chittim was a wealthy man, Lindsey was an old man, and poor and had a pretty young wife upon whom Chittim looked as Potiphar's wife upon young Joseph of Egypt. Thereby hangs a tragedy, and on that tragedy hung the March, a slave, murdered Lindsey, was tried and convicted, and Chittim was put on trial as an accessory before the fact. Chittim retained every lawver that attended Currituck court in his defense, with the sole exception of Kinney. Mr. Iredell, who had been solicitor for the State, was appointed judge on the circuit, vice Judge Lowry, deceased, by the Governor of the State, and he appointed Charles R. Kinney to prosecute for the State, there being no other attorney unemployed to appoint. Mr. Kinney procured a continuance, and from British dependence."

Had these fires confined themselves to Elizabeth City, the damage would not made an able argument, having had have been so serious, but the contagion ample time for preparation. Chittim of strife spread out until the Albemarle was convicted, and was subsequently became one vast military camp in which executed. This was in 1828. After the the best elements of the population from | trial, Mr. Kinney was employed in Gates to Currituck became involved.

. R. Lenny

From 1828 to 1833 the smell of gun-powder and strife was in the air. The first spread of the contagion was to Hertford, in Perquimans county. Jesse Wilson was the leading lawyer in that community. He visited Elizabeth City quite often. He was not particularly combative per se, but he liked the excitement of controversy, though not because the snuff of danger was from afar. Wilson was full of wit and pyrotechnic expression. He readily fell into the ranks of the Shepard party. He was easily indiscreet in expressi and said some ugly words about Mr. Kinney. Mr. Kinney's war blood was up, and he promptly challenged Mr. Wilson to mortal combat. Augustus Moore, of Edenton, (father of Augustus M. Mooore, of Greenville, N. C.), who had been a law student of Kinney, and was his personal friend, bore the challenge to Wilson. Moore was a careful, prudent man, and not a seeker of personal controversy, and sought to avoid them, but would fight if crowded and forced to it. Of the two men he was considerably less dangerous than Kinney, and Wilson was evidently so impressed, and Wilson adroitly turned from Kinney and made a bitter and aggressive fight on Moore, which was followed by a street encounter on the corner where the Albemarle Hotel now stands. In that encounter Wilson would have been killed but for the interference of John B. Muse, an esteemed young lawyer of Elizabeth City, who was neutral in the fight. The encounter between Moore and Wilson was followed by innumerable paper bullets, finally ending in a suit

In 1830 the contagion had spread to Edenton. At Edenton court, Hugh W. Collins, a young man of the town, of wealth and influence, who had a client-age of young men of Edenton hardly less devoted than the following of Shepless devoted than the following of Shepard in Elizabeth City, in a conversation with William Pugh, of Gatesville, used the original charter, like 'the cry of the some expressions derogatory to Mr. Kin- dogs' gives notice. Upon our consultaney. Pugh was a friend of Kinney, as brave as a Bengal-tiger, and promptly man, who comes from a land that resented it with some severity, for which abounds in swamps and lakes, that notent witness and the bungling reconteur. At length Malachi Haughton, of Collins challenged Pugh. Alexander M. tice should be presumed from the nature Edenton, who never said a funny thing, and never knew a joke, in a loud and promptly accepted by Pugh, and Hender- land, that by draining can be made fit son was referred to Dr. Jeptha Fowlks, of Gatesville, the friend of Pugh, to arsomewhat harsh tone, said: "Kinney, damn the judge, why don't he let the witness go on"—and Haughton never did range the terms of a hostile meeting. every one must know that at some time know why the lawyers turned from Mr. Fowlks was a quiet, sensible man, whose or other the swamp will be drained, and the plaintiff will be presumed to have built his mill with an intention to use known to be born fighters, and Collins the water of the swamp until it was every case on the docket, in an hour after he went out of the court house.

Mr. Kinney was especially kind and courteous to the young members of the bar, and stood ready at all times to render them aid and encouragement. On one occasion the late Governor Bragg and the late William W. Cherry were his opposing counsel in a very important case, Beale vs. Askew. Bragg and Cherry were very young men, and re-ferred in their speeches to the em-barrassment they felt in confronting their able opponent. Mr. Kinney in his speech spoke in most complimentary terms of their fine efforts and strong argument, and predicted a grand future for them both. Governor Bragg's re cord is well known, and though Mr. Cherry died young, yet no man in the east has ever made a greater reputation at his age, and it may be safely said that Mr. Cherry was the finest speaker the State has ever produced.

Mr. Kinney wrote, compiled and published a law book entitled "Kinney's Compendium," which received the endorsement, of the bar of the State.

Ex-Attorney General Kenan called my attention to the case of Williamson vs. Canal Company, 76 N. C., 478, in which the late Chief Justice Pearson pays a just compliment to the subject of this sketch. It was a case where the plaintiff sued the defendant for damages in diverting water from his mill. The canal was cut in 1873, but it did not appear at what time the mill was built. On the question of notice and occupancy, the Chief Justice says: "It may be that the notice of occupancy by the defendant will relate back to the original charter.

* * * One who starts a deer and is in pursuit has acquired an inchoate title by occupancy and no third person has a right to kill the animal before his hounds, for there is notice of an intention to appropriate the thing which is ferae naturea. This furnishes an analotion it was suggested by Justice Rod-

"This suggestion recalls to my memory a case tried before me while acting as one of the judges of the 'Superior Courts of Law and Equity' in the county or Perquimans. The plaintiff owned a mill on the outlet of a swamp some miles below its entrance. The defendant cleaned out and deepened the outlet above the plaintiff's mill and partially drained the swamp by means of ditches. The gravamen of the action was that the defendant had by his operations injured the mill which was of long standing, in this, that instead of letting the water of the swamp flow to the mill in its natural way, by which there was a regular supply of water, the acts of the defendant caused the water in time of a rain to run off in excess and leave no regular supply to be retained by the swamps as it used to be; held that the plaintiff had no cause of action-damnum absque injuria, "This decision was submitted to by the plaintiff's attorneys, the late Judge Moore and Mr. Charles Kinney, both of whom were men as learned and able as any who have ever belonged to the bar of this State."

The daughter of his first wife married an Episcopal minister by the name of Harvey Stanly, who was a nephew of the late distinguished John Stanly, stricken with paralysis while speaking in the old Governor's Mansion at the foot of Fayetteville street, when it was occupied by the General Assembly of the State. Some of Mr. Harvey Stanly's sons were noted public men in Maryland, whose descendants may now be living in that State. Mr. Kinney's second wife was a Miss Davis, a daughter of Dr. Davis, of Currituck county. There were several children by this marriage, and the last one of his children, a daughter, died near South Mills, in Camden county, within the last twelve months. As far as I have knowledge, there are now living no descendants or representatives of this second marriage. sometimes called a man's great enemy, an enemy that he can not conquer. In deed, it is man's greatest friend, heals all wounds, soothes all sorrows, allays all bitterness, buries all animosities.

In the Fall Circuit of Courts, Mr. Kinney, who had been for several months in feeble health, resumed his active practice, after recuperating his health at the Virginia White Salpaur Springs. He attended Chowan Superior Court at Edenton, and was employed in all the leading cases on the docket. The Norcom and Mesmer case was for trial, and was of intense interest. It had torn the community into hostile factions, and had much embittered old friendships. Mr. Kinney was employed in it. The witness called was stubborn, and Mr. Kinney gave him a sorching examination. In the progress of the examination he became excited-had a hemorrhage, and had to leave the court room He ordered his horse, and left for his home near Elizabeth City. In passing through Hertford, Perquimans county, twelve miles from Edenton, he had a second large hemorrhage, and was taken into Dr. David Johnson's office, where with a few friends near, he expired on the 9th day of October, 1845, with the words addressed to a young friend whom he recognized: "I know my fate. I am not alarmed. My wife and child-ren, that's all."

Thus died Charles R. Kinney, one of the brightest stars in the legal galaxy of Eastern North Carolina. From the ine of his sudden attacle he doubtless felt his end was near, and made an early effort to reach the bosom of his family, that he might die in their presence and embrace. His efforts failed, and he fell by the wayside, not, however, in the land of strangers, but at the home of friends. His death was a great throughout his section. No man conreated a more heartfelt vacancy.

yard in Elizabeth City. No monument marks his silent resting place, but it is in early contemplation, both by the county of Pasquotank and the members of the bar, to erect a suitable monument

It is meet that the sacred spot, now overgrown with the weeds and the briars, and where the poisonous reptile may nestle in security, should be re placed with a monument commemorative of the deeds and services of one of the most useful and eminent men that ever lived in the Albemarle section.

The intent of , this short imperfect sketch will have been accomplished, if it shall evoke in the minds of the rising generation an impulse or an inspiration to emulate a life whose example is worthy to be followed, and whose record is fit to be imitated.

*Col Creecy has so aided me in material and facts that I have made this sketch our joint effort. Without his aid I could have made no headway; and far more is entitled to him than to me. The association of his name will add an interest, and secure a perusal that nex name, alone, could in nowise have invited or secured.

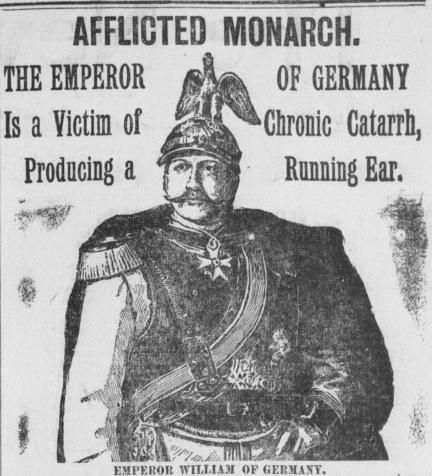

"Take time by the forelock." If your blood is out of order, begin taking Hood's Sarsaparilla at once and prevent FREE BLOOD CURE.

An Offer Proving Faith to Sufferers From Blood and Skin Troubles.

Ulcers, Cancers, Eating Sores, Painful Swellings, Effects of Blood Poison, Persistent Eruptions, that refuse to heal under ordinary treatment are quickly cured by B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm), the most wonderful Blood Purifier of the age, made especially to cure all terrible, obstinate, deep-scated Blood and Skin troubles. Is your blood thin? Are you pale? All run down? Have you Eczema, Pimples, Blotches and Bumps, Skin or Scalp Humors, Boils, Eruptions, Skin Itches and Swollen, Aching Bones, Rheumatism, Scrofula, Catarrh? you need B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm). because it drains from the blood and entire system all the poisons and humors which cause all of these troubles, and the cause being removed, a permanent cure follows. B. B. B. thoroughly tested for thirty years, and thousands cured after doctors and patent medicines had

For sale by druggists at $1 per large bottle, or 6 large bottles (full treatment) tion has its penalties, and he was not the exception. When Kinney's star twinkled in the horizon, the star of Frederick Shephard was in full effulgence. Shephard was of fine physique, brave, ambitious, intelligent, aspiring, and the place of meeting. Pugh and collins would produce the first fruits of blood. The day was appointed pleased to have it discussed, should the brave, ambitious, intelligent, aspiring, and the place of meeting. Pugh and collins would produce the first force in this suggestion and we shall be pleased to have it discussed, should the brave, ambitious, intelligent, aspiring, and the place of meeting. Pugh and collins would produce the first force in this suggestion and we shall be pleased to have it discussed, should the Street, Atlanta, Ga. $5. To prove our faith in B. B. B. we ning ear. Just think of it; a man at whose beck one of the strongest armies and navies of the whole earth could be set in motion, a man whose rule is absolute over the country of medical universities, a man whose slightest caprice could press into service the most noted savants and philosophers on earth, has a running ear and is unable to find a cure!

Now contrast the experience of the following citizens of the United States with the Emperor of Germany. Like the Emperor, they failed to find a cure. But, unlike the Emperot, they happened to be plain citizens of the United States, rather than the center of the inner court simple and that I could cure myself. of the most exclusive and carefully After using $17 worth of his remedies I > approval of the most | Renfro, Norbarne, Mo., who had running fastidious medical ears. Hesays: "My orthodoxy could head gathered and ever reach him. In broke and my ears the position of these ran terribly. I tried American citizens, several remedies however, they had with no relief. At

Scott Bostick, of access to remedies last I got a bottle of old and new, tried Pe-ru-na and it did and untried, ap- me so much good proved and disap- that I kept on using proved. They were at perfect liberty to it; am on the fourth try anything they chose to. They chose bottle, and must say it has removed all to try the remedy that had cured others | my bad symptoms. My head does not like themselves, and thus they found a pain any more, my ears have stopped

Running of the ears, deafness or all other affections of the middle ear, are due primarily to chronic catarrh. Running of the ear is properly called chronic suppurative catarrh. Pe-ru-na will cure catarrh of the middle ear, as well as catarrh located elsewhere. This has been proven over and over again in innumerable cases besides the ones just mentioned. Deafness and running of the ears are but symptoms of chronic catarrh of the middle ear. Pe-ru-na trolled a greater influence, and no death cures the catarrh, when the symptoms disappear, whether it be running ears or entirely free from this horrible disease.

The Emperor of Germany has a run- and lecturer on all catarrhal diseases. The second case, Mr. H. Walter Brady, Cascade, Ark., is a case of suppuration of the middle ear of 14 years' standing. Hesays: "I had running ears, and for 14 years I was almost an invalid. It was so offensive that I excluded myself from all society. I received a pamphlet from Dr. Hartman Mr.H. Walter Brady. entitled 'The Ills of Life.' He wrote me that the remedy was guarded aristocracy of the world. In was entirely cured. The world could his position nothing not buy my fortune. I recommend Pebut the remedies ru-na to all as the best medicine sold." that have met the The third case is that of Rev. S. H.

unning and I feel a great deal better. The next is the case of Master Murphy, of Iatan, Mitchell county, Texas, who nine months old. After a thorough course of treatment with Pe-ru-na he was entirely cured, and Master Murphy. to fact that he is

had been troubled with running ears

ever since he was

He was buried in the Episcopal church deafness or any other affection of the A free book treating catarrh in all of middle ear. The remedy is compounded its different phases and stages, written according to the formula originally de- by Dr. Hartman, will be sent free, by vised by Dr. Hartman of the Surgical addressing The Pe-ru-na Drug Manu-Hotel, Columbus, O., the noted writer facturing Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Business Established 1859.

BROS.

Successors to J. C. S. LUMSDEN.

HARDWARE, STOVES AND

HOUSE FURNISHINGS —We Make a Specialty of—Rooting, Guttering, Furnace and Copper Work.

Your Neighbor Knows Us.