Beavers got only $26,000 and Machen $20, 000 and yet the government had been detrauded out of a total of $3,200,000. It was this amount in which there was interest. There was high authority for saying the Postoffice Department ought to be investigated further. The President and his two attorneys had said this. Yet, the Republicans of the Senate had begged the question and declared there was nothing further to be investigated.

Referring to the charge made a few days ago that the Democrats did not know who their candidate for the Presidency would be, Mr. Teller said:

"No, Mr. President, we do not know whether it will be Cleveland, Parker, Hearst or Bryan. The Democratic party ever know who it is going to nominate until after its convention meets." Mr. Simmons answered the recent speech of Mr. Spooner, who defended Postmaster General Payne from what he treat ed as an attack by Mr. Simmons in previous remarks. Mr. Simmons declared today that his remarks in relation to the relueance of the Postoffice Department to undertake an investigation referred to hesitancy on the part of the former Postmaster General Smith and not to the present Postmaster General, Mr. Payne. He reiterated, however, his belief that the investigation had been delayed and also that the present Postmaster General had not treated fairly the offer of S. W.
