Constable Arrests a Bunch of Marshals and Revenue Offi-

(Special to News and Observer.)

Greensboro, N. C., Sept. 7 .- United States Marshal James Millikan, his two deputy marshals, J. M. Baley and Joe Millikan, and Deputy Collector Hendrix were arrested here today by a township constable on a magistrate's warrant charging them with forcible trespass on the premises of Bud Hilton, two miles in the country. No bond was required, the officers giving their recognizance to appear before the magistrate for trial at White Oak Tuesday next. Hilton alleges that a large force of officers went to his home avay behind the Hills and then there or warrant entered and searched it on pretext of looking for illicit whiskey.

Before our Society he will handle an historical subject in which the whole country is vitally interested, and the address will undoubtedly attract attention in other sections as well as in North Carolina."

Hon. Hannis Taylor was born in New Bern, in 1851, and was educated at the University of North Carolina. He has always taken a deep interest in his native State and made a pleasing address to the North Carolina Press Association at its meeting in Washington City a few years ago. In his letter to Mr. Poe he says: have never been to Raleigh since my two years there at the old Lovejoy school. I shall be glad to see the city once more."

The coming of Mr. Taylor is but the beginning of the definite plan of the Literary and Historical Association to get a speaker of national reputation for each annual meeting. For some time it was thought that Ambassador Bryce would speak this time, and it is not unlikely that Thomas Nelson Page will be the leading speak-

The Bureau of Labor and Printing in North Carolina reports that negro labor in 96 counties in our State is unreliable and worthless. Now we cannot afford to have this said of our people. The hordes of laborers of Europe, who were once sold in the market places of England like sheep in the shambles, are wild to come to this country to take your places, on the farms, in the shops, in the mines, in trusty position in private families, and on the public works; in other words, in all the vocations of life. Let us gird up our loins, therefore, and do better work and more work then any other class, with an honest desire to benefit our employers as well as our selves. Then we shall make friends and hold our own in the ranks of the millions who are progressing and advancing with the sweeping current of a glorious prosperity.

"In order to succeed and hold our ing credit to those who have courage and friendship to speak out for us. The race cannot do too much honor nor give too much credit to Governor Glenn and Ex-Governor Aycock Both of these Christian men have gone on record in this State in the defence of our education and our rights before the courts of the land Their administrations have dealt fairly and squarely by us, and from their public utterances we have received encouragement and hope, to the extent that we believe a better day will soon dawn upon us all."
