

TO SAIL ON TIME
Rushing Work on the BattleShip Fleet

Immense Amount of Repairing Taxes
the Capacity of the Navy Yard.
The Work Will be Done by December 1st.

Washington, Oct. 17.—As a result of the coming cruise of the Atlantic fleet to the Pacific new records for repairs will be made at the Navy Department and the bureau of construction, repair, equipment, ordnance, and steam engineering will have to look sharp not to exceed their appropriations. Everything necessary to put the fleet in prime condition before sailing has been authorized by Secretary Metcalf, and all the bureaus have been heavily taxed. All work has been handled efficiently, however, and there is no doubt now that the fleet will be ready to leave on time and will be in splendid shape. This has been made possible only by rush work at the navy yards and opportune measures adopted by Secretary Metcalf to help complete the enormous amount of repairs.

While no one item of great importance stands out, the list of repairs connected with the fleet's departure has been mounting up daily. When the cruise to the Pacific was first announced Secretary Metcalf directed the commanders of the battleships to begin getting their ships ready. The sixteen battleships were to be repaired and put in condition immediately after target practice at the respective yards, where measures were arranged for receiving them. The navy yard at Boston was to take care of the Vermont, the New Jersey, the Missouri and Illinois; the New York yard had assigned to it the Connecticut, the Rhode Island, the Ohio and the Alabama; the Kansas, the Georgia, the Maine, the Kearsarge and the Indiana were to be put in shape at League Island, and the navy yard at Norfolk was to repair the Louisiana and the Kentucky.

The list of necessary repairs had already assumed large proportions when the announcement of the cruise was first made public. Later, repairs, mostly minor items, began coming thick and fast. Secretary Metcalf also authorized some alterations and special work, such as the installation of fire control systems for the battleships and the installation of fire control systems for use during the cruise. It was readily seen that the men at the navy yards would be kept busy, and when after target practice repairs continued to mount up, the chief clerk, fearing there might be some delay, decided to extend the time which the ships might spend at the navy yards from thirty to forty days. Later, however, no alterations were authorized, so as to give the men at the yards more time to devote to necessary work, and when, after target practice, many of the battleships needed additional repair work, the Navy Department ruled that men at the yards drop all other work if necessary and give the fleet a clear field. The amount of work at the navy yards became so great and caused so much rush work that the department directed that fire control systems be not installed until the battleships reached the Pacific.

Inquiry at the different bureaus of the Navy Department today develops the fact that all work will be done by December 1, as directed by the department.

OLD WORLD GRANDEUR
Exquisite World Painting by Mr. Bryan in His Lecture at Fayetteville.

(Fayetteville Observer.)
Mr. Bryan addressed an audience in the opera house Tuesday evening, by invitation of the Women's Civic Improvement Association, which has lectures go in Fayetteville, was large; but we wish that every man, woman, and child of reflective and appreciative age could have heard it. Only once in a generation does fortune pass along an entertainment of such good cheer. The speaker was briefly but beautifully introduced by Capt. J. D. McNeill, chairman of the committee, and the most distinguished visitor within the city's gates in his history; William Jennings Bryan, not of Nebraska but of the whole broad Union.

We do not know what his theme was. To us it seemed that the world was his stage, and all the men and women merely players. Obedient to that magic tongue and deft hand the puppets stirred into life; and in stately, dramatic procession there passed before the footlights the kings, the great of the earth; nations, their temples and their monuments; olden worlds, with shining minarets and gleaming mosque; the capital of Hazoun Al Rashid, and his Thousand and One Arabian Nights, and its dimly-lit bazaars, with the soft fall of the sandaled foot and the bubble of the fragrant narghileh; the Golden Horn and Constantinople, the prize of the ambition of Bajazet the Thunderbolt, amid the broken walls, the scenes of which the conqueror Sultan Mahomet II. paused to muse.

"The spider hath woven its web in her palace,
And the owl hath sung its woe note in the towers of Afrasiah," sunrise on the Himalayas, the "king of day" swimming out of the depths of the horizon, a great drop of blood, and changing the pure pearl of snow-covered heights to rose and purple, and then to blazing gold, before which the shadows flee down the mountain like hunted deer to sheltering thickets; the Taj Mahal, the marvelous tomb of the Indian princess, Noor Jehan, who inspired Scott's "Lalla Rookh," and the solemn scene drawn from its cold splendor, the wonderful picture of Confucius, in the pride of human philosophy, and the Deaths in LaGrange.

(Special to the News and Observer.)
LaGrange, N. C., Oct. 17.—Miss Ava Waters died Wednesday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. George L. Taylor, in LaGrange. She had been suffering about two weeks from an attack of gastritis.

Paul Mewborn, son of Walter Mewborn, of Jason, a promising young man of about 22 years old, died Wednesday morning of neuralgia in the head.

There seems to be a great misunderstanding about what will become of the property.

They need not worry about that for it is the Lord's work and not to be continued to run as an institution and orphanage as long as He would have it too, and as long as His children in trust are faithful to Him. It is true the title of this property is vested in the manager and dependent, viz: Miss Mattie Perry. But as for its being held in trust for the Holiness church it is not. It is to continue as a school and home for the poor and to pay their expenses. And in case it should fail, her will provides that it should be sold and first of all, the debts of the institution be paid and the remainder to be divided among the children, who all have to acknowledge it is a worthy cause. But it is not going to fall as long as His children are true and faithful. The promise the Lord gives us is Psalms 37:24. With many others show us that He loves us as we trust Him He will be with us.

It seems as if it as only those that go by what they hear others say and not by what they personally know of Miss Perry and her work that are ready to fight the act of the last Legislature in the appropriation made to the Elhanan Institute and Orphanage a most worthy cause.

Two thousand dollars, but instead of its taking her faith off the Lord and putting it on the person making the donation, the Holy Spirit will help her to trust God more implicitly.

Furthermore I wish to say that the Legislature could not have done a nobler act than this for the Elhanan Institute and Orphanage, and those who know personally of Miss Perry and her work say it is a marvelous work.

There was mention made of the revival meeting that is in progress here now and has been for about three weeks. It certainly is doing much good. Many souls are being saved; many sanctified, and many are being drawn to the Holy Spirit and speaking in the "unknown tongues," which so many people stand off and fight through not knowing anything about it.

plus Daniels used the weapon of modern warfare, publicity. The Times learned that it was twice easier to fool itself than anybody else. A revival of reform waged by prudent, honest principled people will bring the right result. A trust owned newspaper can never be depended upon for freedom and frankness, whether in Beaufort county or Wake county. This dust throwing in the people's eyes is exactly what the looters want. The only mysterious thing about the matter is the long patience of the public.

MARRY EARLY SAYS ELIOT.
Harvard President Also Advises Family and House.

Early marriage and the responsibility of a family were recommended to a large gathering at Harvard freshman by President Charles W. Eliot in an address at the Harvard Union. "Look forward to being married; make yourself fit for the loving service you expect your wife to give you; look forward to having children and a house," were some of his admonitions.

"I want to impress you to carry on your university life in the spirit of those who worked hard for you. Look ahead in your university work. Look ahead and what will come out in a few years to that point of life when you will need that judicial choice in effort. Look ahead to your choosing your life work and look ahead to see what the powers may be to give you a place in your life profession. "Look forward to being married. That is to look forward to one of the great privileges of life. Look forward to that kind of an example as a father you would like to set. I have known men to worry about the future of their sons because they themselves were wild at that age of life. Look forward to be serviceable."
