Dealers Association say this change will not help the farmers; many farmers think it will. Only by practical operation can that be determined. Removing all restrictions and tax on tobacco might be the best legislative help to tobacco farmers, but at the present rate of governmental expenses nobody in Congress proposed abolishing all taxes on tobacco. As long as the tobacco trust has the power to fix the price of the farmer's tobacco, can anything really help the farmers?

Judge Landis and the Federal au thorities could not collect that big fine from the Standard Oil Company, but the States seem to be able to do something along that line. Texas has collected a very considerable penalty. Mississippi is after the big monopoly for some $11,000,000. "The States, on certain lines at least, seem to be more powerful than the Federal government, even after years of deliberate efforts to rob the States of their original authority," says the Columbia State. But Texas is the only State that has gone after them without gloves. Most States pass pink tea laws and then let them rest in innocuous desuetude
