VESSELS POSSIBLY CHOLERA CARRIERS

Detained in Quarantine at New York

HAD ONE DEATH AT SEA

This Victim From Cholera Was Buried at Sea on September 25th—Two Suspicious Cases Under Observation—Vessel Has Some Prominent Americans on Board—Five Vessels Are Detained.

(By the Associated Press.) New York, Oct. 4.—The steamship Sant Anna from French and Italian ports, now detained at quarantine, had a case of cholera aboard. The victim, a man in the steerage, died on September 25th and was buried at sea. Two other cases of intestinal trouble are under observation. Meanwhile the Sant Anna, carrying 224 first-class cabin passengers, some of them prominent Americans, and 17 in the steerage, is held as a possible cholera carrier pending further investigation.

Announcement of the foregoing was made tonight by Dr. A. H. Doty, health officer of the port, who has been fighting to keep cholera out of this country during the epidemic abroad. In addition to the Sant Anna, he has as a precaution detained at quarantine, the steamship Motika, from Genoa and Naples, and the steamship Virginia, from Naples.

Tomorrow he will hold a conference with Dr. Walter Wyman, surgeon-general of the Marine Hospital corps. Together they will map out a campaign of protection.

Dr. Doty's statement disclosed not only that a steamer patient died aboard the Sant Anna, but that a steamer passenger, a suspicious case, removed from the steamer Germania on September 25th, subsequently died on Swinburne island. Examination indicated, says Dr. Doty, that this also was a cholera case. Dr. Doty's statement was issued after an examination of the Sant Anna which arrived late last night from Marseilles, Naples, and Palermo. The ship's surgeon presented a report of the death in the steerage caused by gastro-intestinal infection. The victim died on the 25th, Dr. Doty, continues, on the case.

The history of the case indicates very clearly that the man died of cholera. No other cases have developed on the voyage, but there are two cases of intestinal trouble, among the average passengers, among the latter.

DUNCAN MCKINLEY CLASH IN DURHAM POLITICAL JONAH OVER STREETWORK

Tar Heel Radicals Seem to Have Cut Him Out

A TALE OF HIS TRAIL

O. But the Defeated California Congressman, is Optimistic, He Always Predicts Victory, Then Comes the Crash—Fresh From Maine At Beverly Before the Election He Predicted a Republican Victory Whereas Everybody Knows the Result.

(By THOMAS J. FENCE.) Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—The prediction of a North Carolina Republican that Representative McKinley of California, and Vice-President Sherman would be given the privilege of "smelling their engagements" in the State, which was made in his correspondence, bids fair to be realized.

Representative McKinley, the official party Jonah, just completed a stumping tour in Virginia and Tennessee and though advertised to speak in North Carolina did not appear in Tar Heeldom, so far as the public knows. Mr. McKinley is now in New York, and is quoted by The Sun and other papers as having addressed six political meetings in Virginia and four in Tennessee.

In this connection I notice that the ever alert Andrew Joyner says that at Republican State Headquarters there is no word of McKinley's coming to North Carolina. Announcement was made with a little flourish that both Mr. Sherman and Mr. McKinley were to make speeches for the Republican State committee in North Carolina. On this score the foremost leaders of the G. O. P. in North Carolina can refresh their memories by turning to the columns of the morning newspapers of September 11th. On that date the Associated Press sent over the country a telegram from Beverly, stating that Congressman McKinley, fresh from the campaign in Maine, had arrived at the summer White House, and that he would spend several days as the house guest of President Taft. After predicting the election of a solid Republican ticket in Maine, the Associated Press quoted the California Congressman as saying:

"After his visit to Beverly is ended, Representative McKinley will go on a speaking tour to Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. He predicted that the Republicans would have a majority of twelve in the next House of Representatives."

Since Mr. McKinley made the above prediction Maine has gone Democratic and the Republicans have as a result lost two of the twelve majority he said they would have in the next House. The interesting fact to North Carolinians is that while Mr. McKinley made good his announced intention of making Republican speeches in Virginia and Tennessee, he did not keep his promise with respect to North Carolina, though he passed through Tar Heeldom to make his connections in the other two States. The question is, how did the State Republican manage to flag the California Congressman, who made speeches (Continued on page four.)

MR. HILL WILL FIGHT FURTHER EXPENDITURES

The Aberrant Radicals so That He Can Take Legal Action—The Controversy of Opposing Sides—Important Blind Tiger Case—Medical Plans.

Durham, Oct. 4.—The resignation of Alderman John Sprunt Hill last night from the board has been the talk of the city today and what is to be done in the shape of a suit to stop the city from further street work is the most interesting thing of recent news.

Mr. Hill has a large per cent of the people with him, almost every man who has interviewed being with him on the proposition that the city has overestimated itself in street work. The town has a floating indebtedness of $112,500, one of the most important of which was the mastery work of Alderman Hill in Morehead Hill street work last spring. In that memorable fight, in which the immortal leaders of their respective insurgent, Alderman Hill and Mason, Mr. Hill won. He backed some of the most powerful influences in his own backyard and finally won Mayor Gray's vote that granted the Morehead Hill people, though a house divided against itself, that work. It has been shown the costliest of the streets, being much the best.

But the town has grown more and more in debt. Mr. Hill has remarked often its "floating indebtedness" and sometimes says the board agreed to quit further street work. Each year has seen petitions for work long accumulated and badly needed, much of the money in fact, as ailing citizens say, than Morehead Hill. But Alderman Hill was the trend, the driving floating indebtedness, and no submission of the issue to the popular vote. Last night he did not watch at the city treasury and when Alderman Hill beat his overwhelming, the Hill Seaman street work, Alderman Hill resigned.

There was no quarrel in the speeches that each made. They didn't hurt each other. Mr. Mason simply beat Mr. Hill at the game of politics for the once, for the seventh time while the board looked on. Mr. Mason declared that his ward had sent him back to the board over his protest and that he had the largest number of votes of both parties that any member on the board had received. He declared that he did not mean to ignore them, especially when what they asked was not unreasonable.

Both men are bankers, both know how the limit has been run and how the great rich city is having trouble working the banks for further loans. But Mr. Mason is taking the ground that there is neither good politics nor good reason stopping work now when hundreds of citizens are clamoring for something to be done to their streets and a decent entrance into the better thoroughfares of the city is afforded.
