A SPRAY OF ARBUTUS.

Sequestered flower of April days, Thy covert bloom in leafy ways A spell about me weaves.

Thy frosted petals' faint pink glow,

Crystal pure like urns of snow. That all with incepae merflow, Half-hid breaths the leaves.

Thy ear lies close upon the ground, Far off it hears the trilling sound Of Spring's returning tide: Nor lingering snow, nor chilling day,

Thy brittle leaves so harsh and hard and torn by winds, or Winter-marred Belle thy tender face: But he whose days are ever green, Though storms do come and frosts be keen

Is sharer of thy grace.
