Legendary Tales of The Dakota Boy Who Was Abiding Place of the Great Spirit But Nothing Is Left Now

Special to the News and Observer.

The legend of the Dakota boy who was the abiding place of the Great Spirit, and who was the only one of his kind to be seen by the white man, has been the subject of many legends and stories. It is said that the boy was seen by the white man in the year 1804, and that he was the only one of his kind to be seen by the white man. The boy was said to be the only one of his kind to be seen by the white man, and he was said to be the only one of his kind to be seen by the white man.

mentioned in early histories of the north-west portion of the United States. They determined to plan for a meeting in 1887 for their descendants in the same place.

But before another century had well started, the railway with which the Dakota boy had been shown the way of the white man had been built, and the boy's abiding place had been destroyed.

HAYNES 5-Passenger Touring Car $2100

We Could Cut $500 Out of the Haynes and No One But An Expert Would Know It

THAT doesn't mean it couldn't be found out later on. For it would be, and "later on" is not a good time to find out things about the car you buy. Find out before you buy.

It's a fact, we could cut the heart right out of the Haynes and few men could tell it by looking at the car. It might still be just as big and handsome. But it wouldn't have the stuff in it—the materials and the workmanship. It would not represent what we consider necessary efficiency in an automobile.

There is nothing simpler than to cheapen a car. Take fifty dollars off here, twenty-five there, forty somewhere else, and so on in a dozen ways and places. Easy enough to buy inferior materials, rush the workmanship, cut out the days and days of testing, and let the body go through with six or seven coats of finishing instead of eighteen.

The Haynes 5-passenger touring car Model 21, fully equipped, sells for $2100 and it's worth every dollar of the price.

The Haynes 1912 Line is worth seeing, worth studying. A wide choice of bodies on our two standard 1912 chassis, Model 21, 40 h. p., 4 1/2 x 5 1/2 in. motor, 120 in. wheel base, 36x4 in. tires, demountable rims, and Model Y, 50-60 h. p., 5x5 1/2 in. motor, 127 1/2 in. wheel base, 37x5 in. tires, demountable rims. Full equipment with all models.

But to build a car that way wouldn't be the Haynes way, and such a car wouldn't be a Haynes car.

Come in and see the Haynes. See for yourself that NOTHING is cut out of the Haynes that you would EXPECT in a Haynes.
