The Passing Throng

Attorney Heuben Oscar Everett, whose administration as bill clerk of the Oyster Ever-It, as official records, was here yesterday on his way to Martin county, his old home, to spend a few days before setting sail for Columbia University, New York.

Mr. Everett will study law up there. He means to spend the summer term at Columbia, while his senior partner, Judge James S. Manning, holds down the office in Durham. He takes occasional summer courses between practice and brushes up on his Blackstone while the partner is figuring per cent or making out a mortgage.

He declares that he has an ambition now to learn more law to practice more law, to fill up on what was and modern instances. 'I am wedded to my profession,' he said yesterday, and it is the hope of his Raleigh friends that he will never have to get a divorce from it on the ground of incompatibility and non support.

Mr. Everett is a native of North Carolina and has spent his entire life in this State. He is a member of the bar and has been practicing law in Durham for many years.
