Ten Favored Plaintiff and Two For Defendants - Eleven Against Adam McArthur

Took Eleven Days To Try Case. Plaintiff Pleased By Preponderance of Sentiment-Twelve Other Cases

The jury in the Citizens Bank vs. McArthur case, after a patient strugevidence, returned yesterday afternoon about four o'clock and reported its inability to agree.

It brought back an interesting story of the wrestle with testimony and argument. Having heard that the jury stood ten to two on one issue and eleven to one on another, the defense had concluded that it had won a majority victory. The comfort of that faith was brief. Jurors in open court told how they had debated the issues and the plaintiff that the majority from the start.

The first ballot in the case was taken Thursday evening. It then took seven to five for the plaintiff bank. The jury retired and vester. day morning the second was eight to four for the bank. The third was ten to two for the bank. Jurors disagree as to whether there was a vote of 11 to 1 on all issues, but there that they had signed it and would be the second would be seen signed and alleged to have been signed to have been signed. The hard the note in good faith, the testimony went, and had issued notice to the endorsers of 11 to 1 on all issues, but there that they had signed it and would be not the second work that they had signed it and would be not the second was eight to have been signed to have been signed and alleged to have been signed as the second was eight to four for the bank. puted signatures. The plaintiff brought no paid experts, but it had strong testifiers who had known the McArthur handwriting. It was stronger in that aspect of the case than the defense was.

The plaintiff made the stronger onclusion with its evidence. It came back on rebuttal in powerful fashion. The defense had ended two days too late. These be "expert" comments, animadversions after the battle. They are what opposing lawyers have said. They are the con-clusions of the generals. The argu-ments to the jury were a standoff. Both sides were presented in great shape for it was a masterly aggre-gation of lawyers.

The disagreement means that the case must be tried here in May, per-haps, certainly it must be tried here again. Both have shown their hand ten and used in future trials. In the nature of things, the disappointment is greater with the defense than with the plaintiff, which came so near to receiving agreement upon all issues. The trial began February 16 and uninterruptedly through yester-It is believed that a future trial be concluded within eight work ing days if not less. There are jury trial.
