man towards the phenomena of life has been one of what may be called thoughtfulness. He has speculated rather than observed, theorized rather than experimented.

With many growing interests in science, a different mental attitude has been manifested and this changed attitude has had marked effect upon our educational ideals and methods.

Dr. James Y. Joyner, speaking on behalf of the public schools of the State, characterized the inaugural ceremony as an epoch-making event. "The public schools and the University each must serve and each must foster the other," was the declaration of Dr. Joyner.

EDWIN A. ALDERMAN President of University of Virginia.

President Edwin Alderman of the University of Virginia took as his theme democracy, especially in its relation to education, and education in its relation to democracy.

Continuing, Doctor Alderman said: "If such then be the nature of modern democracy, it is very clear that the school and the one thing the school, high or low, cannot do without is a clear notion of how to train all men not only to perform the duties of citizenship but to give all men an opportunity to obtain a fair share of the fullness of life."

versity, existing both as the symbol and the servant of the spiritual insights and practical needs of its epoch.

Doctor Alderman seen in the growth of education a corresponding growth in the spirit of democracy. Life or death to American democracy depends on whether its scheme of education shall be strong, and catholic enough to reach not alone the youth to be educated, but all the forces which surrounded him and which called for his cooperation.

Following the speeches of President Alderman of Virginia and President Goodnow of Johns Hopkins the announcement was made of the detention at home of President Lowell and President Finley. President Lowell's death in his family and President Finley was detained by pressing business engagements.

The inaugural address of President Graham came in immediate succession. Clear and cogent in the statement of the educational philosophy contained therein the document will preserve for itself a place in the educational life of the State.

The obligations of a Southern university to the modern State was a portion of his address prophetic of the future policy of the University of North Carolina in its constructive program for the welfare of all the people.

On the conclusion of the inaugural address, President George Denny, of the University of Alabama, brought greetings on behalf of the State universities.

Dean L. P. McGehee, of the University law school, brought greetings from the University faculty. "We pledge loyal support and co-operation of the faculty," he said.

President George H. Denny of the University of Alabama brought greetings on behalf of the State universities. "There is something quite distinctive," he said, "in the atmosphere of this place and the life of this institution."

Who can measure the height and depth of that service? It has strengthened and sustained and glorified the very fabric of your civilization.

In happy felicitations of the honors conferred upon the new president of the university, President W. J. Martin of Davidson College brought greetings on behalf of the colleges of North Carolina.

GEORGE H. DENNY President of University of Alabama.

Education is a much abused term and that there is a war over educational standards and values. But said the Davidson president: "If we can amid it all remember that our chief concern in college and university is to develop manliness, an earnest desire for truth, and a passion for unselfish service, we shall not go far astray."

Boushall Represents Students. Boushall represented the student body. Free democracy and co-operation as characterizing the administration of President Graham was his theme.

Dean L. P. McGehee, of the University law school, brought greetings from the University faculty. "We pledge loyal support and co-operation of the faculty," he said.

The benediction was pronounced by Bishop Edward Rondthaler, and the University hymn concluded the ceremony of the inaugural day.

ing to realize the great opportunities at hand and the high ideals to be realized, that there was being found the alchemy of the moral and intellectual progress of the age.

Former President Kemp P. Battle was next introduced and in his response he set out discoveries which made men greater than any discoveries made by Columbus.

Venable Rejoices With Graham. Secretary Daniels paid high tribute to the services of former President Venable, who was next introduced.

Dr. Venable declared that he rejoiced to see this day for the University, and for President Graham, who had ever been staunch and loyal to him, one of his strongest supporters.

Dr. Venable spoke of his having been for thirty-five years at the University, coming to it when twenty-three years old, that in those early days finances were close with 150 students in attendance with honest work done.

Dr. W. Lash Miller, of the University of Ontario, stated that he brought greetings on behalf of the American Chemical Society to Dr. Charles Herty on his election as president of the American Chemical Society.

Greetings From Bryn Mawr. Secretary Daniels in the happiest of terms introduced Miss Marion Reilly, dean of the faculty of Bryn Mawr.

Calling a Loan. Secretary Daniels introduced as a North Carolinian loaned to Virginia, Dr. C. Alphonsus Smith, of the University of Virginia, declaring him a really great scholar.

a legislature is distinctive. The growth of these he held as evolution of the State. He noted the advance in North Carolina, that its University, once the oldest of State universities, is now the youngest.

Prof. W. A. Nittle of the Modern Language Department of the University of Chicago, brought greetings from it to President Graham and the University, that the message came with the hope that the modern language work the companionship of the two universities would be stimulated.

Dr. D. H. Hill, president of the A. and M. College, brought warm greetings and with a most fitting illustration spoke of the advancement which was possible for the State University, that he believed its material growth would be aided by the administration of President Graham.

Dr. Charles Baskerville was introduced as a North Carolinian who had been loaned to New York, that in a high degree his great work as a chemist was recognized. Dr. Baskerville in his remarks paid tribute to the instruction given him in chemistry by Dr. Venable and gave greetings from the New York Academy of Science and the College of the City of New York.

Attorney-General T. W. Bickett in happy words declared that this day launched a big influence for civilization, for culture and cultivated brains. He congratulated President Graham on being in sympathy with the views of the people of the State that his administration could but benefit the State.

Dr. Miles Expresses Joy. Dr. Miles of Vanderbilt University expressed his joy at being present, that the day was one of happiness to him because of the position attained by his personal friend. He congratulated the University of the day, and in closing said that in Charles H. Aycock he had found the very spirit of this great commonwealth, and that this would be carried out in the administration of President Graham and that in the liberal arts he felt his administration would be a noble one.

The last speaker was former Judge James S. Manning, who Secretary Daniels said had attended every commencement of the University since 1875, when the institution re-opened.

Judge Manning said he had entered the University in 1875, and had known it for forty years, five years longer than Dr. Venable. He told of the early days, with sixty-six students in his 2nd year, and told of the progress made since then. The faith of men of that early day brought forth good things for the State and the University, he said, and in closing expressed his hopes for the progress and prosperity of the University and the success of its new president.

This closed the luncheon and ended an event which had been full of delight.

Deaths and Funerals

MRS. LUCY GALLOWAY.

(Special to The News and Observer.) Goldsboro, April 21.—The death of Mrs. Lucy G. Galloway, relict of the late Capt. A. J. Galloway, and the venerable mother of Mrs. Isabel G. Miller and Mrs. Thos. R. Robinson, of this city, occurred yesterday morning at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of the latter, on William street, where she had gone some days ago, as was her wont, occasionally, to spend a while, making her home, however, with her daughter, Mrs. Isabel Miller, on Chestnut street, west, aged 90 years, 2 months and 20 days, having been born January 21, 1825.

Besides her two daughters, here named, Mrs. Galloway is survived by eight grandsons and three granddaughters, Messrs. Andrew J. Flanner, of New York; R. A. Watts, of this city; Frank and Eugene Watts, of Kingstree, S. C.; Jack, Rea and Henry Shannon, Mrs. Mary Hedrick and Mrs. Florence Hall, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Miss Josephine Shannon, and Master T. R. Robinson, Jr., and several great grandchildren.

J. C. HORNE.

(Special to The News and Observer.) Warsaw, April 21.—The funeral of Mr. J. C. Horne which was held at his home town, Magnolia, nine miles south of here on Monday morning was largely attended by people of this city, and adjoining sections. The deceased was a Mason of some prominence and for years has been one of the leading business men and merchants of Duplin county. His death occurred at his home Sunday morning at 4 o'clock.

The remains were escorted to the Methodist church by the Knights of Pythias lodge of Magnolia where the pastor, Rev. Mr. Munda, held a song and prayer service accompanied by a few remarks setting forth the excellence of his life and christian character. The body was then turned over to his brother Masons to be interred with the rites of that order under the direction of Senator R. D. Johnson of this city, acting Master.

MRS. ANNIE LAROCHE.

(Special to The News and Observer.) Kingston, April 21.—The funeral of Mrs. Annie E. LaRoque, one of Kingston's best known women, was held here this morning at 11 o'clock. She died suddenly at her home on North Queen street Monday night following an attack of acute indigestion which superinduced heart failure. She was the widow of the late Walter D. LaRoque and mother of Postmaster Walter D. LaRoque, Mabson LaRoque and C. Frank LaRoque, of this city; Dr. Paul LaRoque, of Richmond, and Oscar K. LaRoque, of Marion, S. C. She was in her 64th year. Mrs. LaRoque was socially prominent, was connected with some of the oldest and most esteemed families of the section, and was a devout Christian. Rev. B. P. Smith, pastor of Gordon Street Christian church, conducted the service. Interment was in Maplewood cemetery.

DR. J. E. HAWTHORNE.

(Special to The News and Observer.) Asheville, April 21.—Dr. J. E. Hawthorne, one of Asheville's leading dentists and prominent in the lumber circles in western North Carolina, died at his home on Haywood street yesterday following an extended illness. The funeral will be conducted tomorrow by Rev. R. F. Campbell, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which the deceased was a consistent member. Dr. Hawthorne is survived by a wife, two daughters, two sisters and a brother. He was the vice-president of the Asheville Dental Society and the president of the Swannanoa Lumber Company.
