

Charges Germany With Wholesale Murder.

(Continued from Page One.)
Owner's Jury.
The verdict of the coroner's jury...

"Yes," replied the Captain. "We were not in any way alarmed. The weather was clear. Capt. Turner answered, 'We were going at a speed of about 10 knots...'

"No, it was bright weather and land was clearly visible."
"Was it possible for a submarine to approach without being seen?"

"I cannot say."
"Where you going a zig-zag course at the moment the torpedo struck?"

"No, it was bright weather and land was clearly visible."
"Was it possible for a submarine to approach without being seen?"

Thin People Can Increase Weight

This man and woman who would like to increase their weight with 20 or 25 pounds of healthy, stay this fat should try eating a little cereal with their meals for a few days...

"Yes," replied the Captain. "We were not in any way alarmed. The weather was clear. Capt. Turner answered, 'We were going at a speed of about 10 knots...'

"No, it was bright weather and land was clearly visible."
"Was it possible for a submarine to approach without being seen?"

"I cannot say."
"Where you going a zig-zag course at the moment the torpedo struck?"

"No, it was bright weather and land was clearly visible."
"Was it possible for a submarine to approach without being seen?"

"I cannot say."
"Where you going a zig-zag course at the moment the torpedo struck?"

PARTISAN BEATS FAIRMONT.

Fairmont, May 10.—Partisan defeated Fairmont in a fast game by a score of 3 to 2. Partisan won two of the games in a series of three.

Corner Stone Placed for Confederate Woman's Home

(Continued from Page One.)
Fayetteville, one copy poem "Masonry," by Hon. Francis D. Winston, past Grand Master; copy address Hon. Francis D. Winston; copy Fayetteville Daily Observer May 5, 1915; list of names of directors and advisory board of lady managers Confederate Home for Women; newspaper containing picture and sketch of "Our First Chairman," Hon. Ashley Horner, invited to the laying of the corner stone to the North Carolina Women of the Confederacy, presented to the State by Col. Ashley Horner.

"The thin gray line of Confederacy fade away in glory as Appomattox to reappear in blue under the stars and stripes of our united country, fighting for Cuban independence, lead by Pitts Hugh Lee and Joe Wheeler, Confederate Brigadiers then become general of the nation and leading former soldiers to the glorious independence, such as they contended for, but lost, in the sixties."

"But, ladies, the duty you have assumed is not a woman's tribute to be paid to the woman of the Confederacy. Of them no sufficient memorial can be erected for there are limitations even to the greatest artistic genius. The only memorial that can be erected is the living memory of their noble lives and their heroic deeds, which will be the torch of the loftiest flights of genius."

"I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country."

"I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country."

"I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country."

Quickly Believes Without Distress

The congestion of waste and refuse from the stomach, fermenting in the bowels, generates poisonous gases that occasion distress and invite serious illness. Health and comfort demand that this congestion be speedily relieved and the foul mass expelled.

"The thin gray line of Confederacy fade away in glory as Appomattox to reappear in blue under the stars and stripes of our united country, fighting for Cuban independence, lead by Pitts Hugh Lee and Joe Wheeler, Confederate Brigadiers then become general of the nation and leading former soldiers to the glorious independence, such as they contended for, but lost, in the sixties."

"But, ladies, the duty you have assumed is not a woman's tribute to be paid to the woman of the Confederacy. Of them no sufficient memorial can be erected for there are limitations even to the greatest artistic genius. The only memorial that can be erected is the living memory of their noble lives and their heroic deeds, which will be the torch of the loftiest flights of genius."

"I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country."

"I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country."

"I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country."

Maxixe Chocolate-Covered Cherries

Crushed Pineapple in Cream, Chocolate-covered
Crushed Strawberry in Cream, Chocolate-covered

PRICE 33c

KING-CROWELL DRUG CO.

The Retail Store.

Highly Dependable Age.
"we are living in a highly dependable age. There is no such thing as an independent ship on the ocean of life. When a man embarks upon it he should see the wireless instrument of his heart to catch the faint message from the other man; and the man who has not attuned his sympathies to the welfare of his fellowman will go down in a worse wreck than that into which the Titanic dashed. This has given to Masonry its universality; this heart union of men; the mysterious going out of something that emanates from one spirit and joins it to another spirit."

"The stranger who pines this building will be impressed with its architectural beauty, and will admire its grandeur, but he will be more deeply impressed with the story written in his conception, and completion when he hears that it was erected by a grateful state to commemorate the devotion and heroism of its noble women in home, in camp, in hospital, in the darkest hour of their history. No nobler and more fitting monument can be reared to mark the devotion of woman."

"Genius hath not conceived, nor skill executed, masterpiece, however grand in conception, or wonderful in execution that can fitly typify the devotion and sacrifice of Southern womanhood. The only monument that can be erected is the living memory of their noble lives and their heroic deeds, which will be the torch of the loftiest flights of genius."

"I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country."

"I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country."

"I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country."

"I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country."

Maxixe Chocolate-Covered Cherries and TRIOLA SWEETS, Something New. Crushed Pineapple in Cream, Chocolate-covered. Crushed Strawberry in Cream, Chocolate-covered. PRICE 33c. KING-CROWELL DRUG CO. The Retail Store.

Curing Catarrh is a Simple Method. Go to its Source and the Cure is Then Accomplished. Only those who have used S. & S. for the blood know that catarrh is simply a blood trouble.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE Bank of Wake. Loans and discounts, $2,382.78. Overdrafts secured, $49.71; unsecured, $482.32. 1,032.53. Banking House, Furniture and Fixtures, 5,023.93. Due from Banks and Bankers, 17,448.40. Cash items, 1,234.62. Gold coin, 452.50. Silver coin, including all minor coin currency, 434.76. National bank notes and other U. S. notes, 1,234.00.

RESINOL BEGINS TO HEAL SICK SKIN AT ONCE. You don't have to WONDER if Resinol Ointment is doing you good. You KNOW it is, because the first application stops the itching and your tortured skin feels cool and comfortable at last.

STUDEBAKER OWNERS. Owing to our mechanical efficiency, courteous treatment and prompt attention, in matters vital to automobile owners, we have just received the STUDEBAKER SERVICE STATION appointment for this territory. We will, in the future, look after and care for Studebaker interests in this vicinity. We can be of service to you. CALL ON US.

Raleigh Motor Car and Machine Company. 111-113 S. Salisbury St., and 120-6 E. Morgan St. L. McA. GOODWIN, MGR., RALEIGH, N. C.

The Weather. LOCAL OFFICE U. S. WEATHER BUREAU. FORECAST. Raleigh, N. C., May 10, 1915. For North Carolina: Fair Tuesday; Wednesday fair, warmer; moderate northeast and east winds.

TEMPERATURE. 8 a. m. 89 5 p. m. 88. Highest temperature 88. Lowest temperature 86. Mean temperature 86. Average daily excess minus 0.3.

GIRLS IN BAD HEALTH. Hundreds of girls go to work day after day, afflicted with some ailment peculiar to their sex, dragging one foot wearily after the other, working always with one eye on the clock and wishing for closing time to come.

KILL THE FLY AND SAVE THE CHILD. Shepard's House Fly Driver and Insect Exterminator. KILLS ALL INSECTS. Not injurious to People. Used with a spray. Rests the respect of Health by ridding the Home of the disease carrying Fly. For sale at all first class Grocers. SHEPARD'S CHEMICAL CO., WILMINGTON, N. C.

Charges Germany With Wholesale Murder. (Continued from Page One.) Owner's Jury. The verdict of the coroner's jury follows: "We find that the deceased met death from prolonged immersion and exhaustion in the sea eight miles south southwest of Old Head of Kinsale, Friday, May 7, 1915, owing to the sinking of the Lusitania by torpedo fired by a German submarine. We find that this appalling crime was committed contrary to international law and the conventions of all civilized nations. We also charge the officers of said submarine and the Emperor of Germany under whose orders they acted with the crime of wholesale murder before the tribunal of the civilized world. We desire to express sincere condolence and sympathy with the relatives of the deceased. The Canadian Company and the United States, many of whose citizens perished in this murderous attack on an unarmed liner. Coroner Horgan said that the first torpedo fired by the German submarine did serious damage to the Lusitania, but that not satisfied with this the Germans had discharged another torpedo. The second torpedo, he said, must have been more deadly, because it went right through the ship, hastening the work of destruction. Captain Turner Principal Witness. Captain Turner was the principal witness at the hearing. He testified that he was on the bridge when the Lusitania was torpedoed. He was aware that the ship would be torpedoed. "We were," the Captain replied. "No, sir." "What precautions did you take?" "We had all the boats swung when we came within the danger zone, but the Lusitania was torpedoed and the time of the accident." "Aided whether he had received 'any special instructions as to the voyage,'" replied that he had, but was not "flattered" that they were. "Did you carry them out?" asked the coroner. "Yes, to the best of my ability," the Captain replied. "The coroner asked, 'You were aware that the ship would be torpedoed?'" "The weather was clear," Capt. Turner answered. "We were going at a speed of about 10 knots on the port side and heard Second Officer Heford call out: 'Here's a torpedo.'"

Corner Stone Placed for Confederate Woman's Home. (Continued from Page One.) Fayetteville, one copy poem "Masonry," by Hon. Francis D. Winston, past Grand Master; copy address Hon. Francis D. Winston; copy Fayetteville Daily Observer May 5, 1915; list of names of directors and advisory board of lady managers Confederate Home for Women; newspaper containing picture and sketch of "Our First Chairman," Hon. Ashley Horner, invited to the laying of the corner stone to the North Carolina Women of the Confederacy, presented to the State by Col. Ashley Horner. Among the prominent visitors present were Mrs. E. E. Little, president of the North Carolina Division U. D. C.; Mrs. Marshall Williams, of Falson, president of U. D. C.; Mrs. Williams; Lieut. Governor, Daughtride, of Rocky Mount; Colonel Bryan, of New Bern, chairman of the board of directors of the Home; J. A. Turner, of Raleigh, chairman of the board; E. F. Smallwood, of New Bern, architect of the Home; Dr. and Mrs. McQuinn, of Clayton; Mrs. McCuller, of the same place; Mrs. Ashley Horne, who was so deeply interested in the Home. Mrs. Cassandra, president of the Smithfield Chapter U. D. C.; Mrs. Wm. Ellington, of Smithfield; Mrs. Wm. Stead, president of Rocky Mount Chapter U. D. C.; Mrs. Ingram; Wadesboro, corresponding secretary of the North Carolina Division U. D. C.; Mrs. Faison Hicks, of Dunn; Mrs. Thad T. Herah, of Tarboro, recording secretary of the North Carolina Division and former president; Mrs. Wm. C. Crayton, of the same place; and Colonel Benahan Cameron, of Stagville. Gov. Winston's Address. "When I was a boy I read an interesting story about the noblest of the Siam people. It was to the effect that some three hundred years after the death of Buddha, it was decided to open his tomb and move his body to the state of Burma. When the bolt was drawn and the door of the tomb thrown open, the great surprise of those present, the lamps that custom had lighted three centuries before, the bright light of burning and filled with oil; and garlands of flowers which loving subjects had placed on the casket of gold, were as beautiful, fresh and fragrant as when royal hands, drawn from the royal gardens, and the scent of their delicate perfume seemed even more exquisite than of growing plants. "On such memorial day this beautiful story leads me to my memory. Today we open the tomb of our hearts and memories, where lie buried our holy love; the dead Confederacy and its heroes; its glories and its shadows. Passing time has not dimmed the brightness of their fame, nor wither the laurels that bespeak their glories, nor dry one tear we should sacredly shed in loving memory of their sorrow. "Eternity will find the fame of the Confederate soldier as glorious and as secure as it was on that fateful day of surrender on the crimsoned sea of the South Atlantic. Ladies: I deeply prize the signal honor you have done me in linking my name with the events of this memorable day, what we go and say in this hour will be for my memory. This recurring festival, May 10th will mean much more to those who come after us because of the erection on this spot of this magnificent memorial. They will see how love, loyalty and gratitude in action; in living form. In reality we have reached the practical stage in dealing with the Confederacy, its heroes and its memories. "Let us talk less of the patriotism, principles, and performances of the crippled Confederate and increase his pension; and rear more homes for his widow, and for those whose want gives him sorrow. No Experience in Battle. "I bring you no experience from the line of battle or from the tented field. I heard the roar of cannon in the angry contest, but my motherly instincts thunders to my youthful ears. I saw soldiers, who it was when peace had spread her wings and was hovering over our growing and desolated homes. I saw them, the soldiers of the victorious Union, tramping by with playing bands "neath floating flags, in compact ranks, to home and loved ones where, glasses, plenty and joy awaited them. I saw them, the closed Confederacy, of Pender and of Pettigrew, painfully plodding in struggling bands to sad and silent hearthstones, where, went wailed, but where love and faith and honor were giant strong. "The Confederacy, to me, is a passing picture, not a reality. I knew it in cyprus, not in laurel, in defeat not in victory. I saw the plain of the women, its new made graves, its slightest eyes, its empty cot alone. "I saw at Kittrell's Springs, then North Carolina's summer resort, hundreds of boys, and hearing them, men, all in deep mourning, not in special grief for loss of husband, brother, father, or friend, but in silent sorrow for the whole Southland, death bed of the brave and the true. Klansman Lay Dead. "I recall my sainted mother waiting at sunset for the daily mail, with sorrowing heart, and trembling hands, expecting the letter of the day, and that wet her cheek told me that another brave klansman or friend lay stark in death near the cannon's mouth on some battle field of Virginia. "I saw Blair's division of Sherman's army, 30,000 men, encamp in my father's grove in Franklin county, and build their white city in the glory of the setting sun, and light its streets with their camp fires. I walked proudly among them with infantile pockets stuffed with Confederate bills of large denominations and refused with disdain to take a cent in exchange for the soldiers offered me for holding his tent ropes. I would render him a neighborly act, but I would not receive the pay. I saw then the first evidence of a rebellion, I have since seen the weak before; my father, an officer of the Confederacy and General Francis P. Blair, an officer of the Union, army, march around my father's table, reading with boyish glee the college days when they were fellow-students at the University of North Carolina. I was then but a child of eight years, and he sat in that meeting the term of a remitted country. Know Much of Soldier. "While I knew but little of the Confederacy and its war, I have known much of its soldiers and its principles in the time of peace. I have seen the Confederate soldier conquering for himself and his comrades the good opinion of the world. I have heard him called a traitor, rebel, misguided and mistaken, and finally recognized as a patriot. "I have heard the fundamental basis of the Confederate Code of Honor condensed, apologetically, and admitted to be technically correct, and finally conceded to be both legally and morally right yesterday in children's court. PROPOSALS FOR THE LIGHTING FIXTURES OF THE NEW WAKE COUNTY COURT HOUSE. The contract for the fixtures complete, installed, for lighting the new Wake County Court House, will be let on Tuesday, June 8, 1915, at 3 o'clock, p. m. The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids. JOHN A. HILL, Chairman. B. W. Smith, Clerk.

FOR NEUROUS DISTRESS. Wake Forest's Acid Phosphate. Suffer from nervous distress, nervous prostration, or other ailments? This tonic beverage will build up your system and restore your health.

PROPOSALS FOR THE LIGHTING FIXTURES OF THE NEW WAKE COUNTY COURT HOUSE. The contract for the fixtures complete, installed, for lighting the new Wake County Court House, will be let on Tuesday, June 8, 1915, at 3 o'clock, p. m. The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids. JOHN A. HILL, Chairman. B. W. Smith, Clerk.