OAKWOOD CEMETERY.

NOTICE FROM MANAGEMENT.
During the past week a number of inattentive drivers of automobiles in Oakwood Cemetery in turning round have backed into private lots, in one instance doing material damage. This constitutes a serious and especially intolerable character for it is a trespass and to some extent a desecration of what every respectable citizen regards as most sacred. And there is in fact no excuse whatever for it as the drivers are so placed that one can turn round by keeping straight ahead.

We assume that these things have been done in ignorance or thoughtlessness heretofore, but to prevent a recurrence of similar abuse the management of the Cemetery have promulgated and a sense of duty to let owners will accept the enforcement of the following rules:

1. Maximum rate of speed ten miles per hour.
 2. No backing or turning round of any vehicle while in driveway. There are no blind drives to reach any point without backing or turning car.
 3. Keep on the drive and off the sidewalk both.
 4. In turning around keep off private and public lots.
 5. Children and automobiles in funeral procession are expected and requested to keep to the same order as when entering the Cemetery.
- Oakwood "God's Acre" is sacred and private property and all rules adopted by the management for its protection and upkeep must be observed.
- COMMITTEE ON LOTS AND GROUNDS.
R. E. LEWIS, Chairman.

Twenty and One

According to recent figures, twenty concerns go out of business within a few years for every one that succeeds. This doesn't mean that the average man knows nothing about his business, but simply that costs, competition, style changes and a dozen other influences combine to make merchandising an uncertain proposition. It isn't the retail merchant alone who has these conditions to fight, for an equally great percentage of corporations and manufacturers are failing to make money. Success in business today has come to be a question of right methods—of the same intensive work that the modern farmer must use in living up his worn-out land. Intensive merchandising means careful buying, regulation of expense, quick turnovers, keeping a stock that is fresh and up to date, and weeding out slow selling and unprofitable lines. The man who studies his business—who keeps a simple set of accounts that tell him the conditions of his sales, profits, the amount of stock on hand, what he owes and what is owed him, his expenses, the sales of his clerks and the way in which goods are moving—has reduced the odds against himself by at least half. He can use this information to locate weakness, to guard against mistakes, and to guide his future moves. It has been our experience that a business man's chances for success are about in proportion to the insight he has to the facts about his business—an insight that can be gained most economically through accurate bookkeeping. This doesn't mean the installation of a complicated set of books. It is possible to get the necessary information about a business through the use of a few simple records. It is not our purpose in discussing these matters to pose as business experts, but simply to place at your service what experience we have had with business conditions. If we can offer any suggestions, that will help you to answer some of the questions you are facing, we will do so gladly. You can be sure that any matter you may wish to discuss with us will be considered carefully and in strict confidence.
