WENIE DEALERS IN DURHAM QUARRELED

One Wanted To Form Monopoly To Boost Prices, Another Objects, Threats Follow

By JAMES A. ROBINSON.
Durham, July 30.—Steve Proctor, proprietor of a local wenie stand, was before the recorder this morning on a peace warrant, charging him with making threats against the life of Louis Costello, another wenie stand owner. According to the testimony, Proctor went to Costello's place of business, on several occasions, and requested Costello to sign himself with four other wenie stand owners, in the city, for the purpose of raising the price of wenies and drinks. When he refused to do so, Proctor visited his place of business yesterday, and threatened to "crack his head and break his back." Later the same day Costello says Proctor told him that he would bet one thousand dollars that he (Costello) would not live three days unless he agreed to make the proposed raise. Proctor denied threats. Judge Graham returned a verdict of probable cause, and placed the defendant under a $200 bond with the requirement that he appear on the first Tuesday in each month for six months, to show good behaviour towards all citizens and towards Louis Costello especially. Proctor appealed. His bond was fixed at $100.

Yesterday afternoon, around 6 o'clock, Deputy Cat Belvir, Joe Pleasant and Lonnie Morgan, returned to the city from the northern section of the county, where they raided a blockade distillery, securing a large still with a capacity of 80 gallons or more, together with other equipment for successful operation. A large run of whiskey had just been made and the operators had disappeared with it, the officers failed to make an arrest. The officers state it was one of the best equipped of its kind they had ever seen. The still was brought to the city.
Carried Him to Stonewall.
H. A. Forester, superintendent of public welfare, and probation officer for the juvenile court, left the city this morning for Concord, accompanied by Lockwood Pickett, a small boy who is being placed in the Stonewall Jackson Training school by the local juvenile court.

The Pickett boy along with Ed Green, a small colored boy are the only two delinquents out of a number of between 40 and 50 handled by the court that have been given sentences for breaking parole after being placed on probation.

Getting Jobs Wholesale.
Since the war, the American Government has become accustomed to doing things wholesale. It is now getting jobs wholesale. The Government is not satisfied merely with granting each soldier and sailor a certificate of honorable discharge and a bonus of sixty dollars. Its aim is to get every service man into a job as well—his former job or a better one.

The jobs are there, and the government is there to get them. All that is needed is cooperation all around. The government that put over the mobilization of four million men into military service in a surprisingly short period can be trusted to secure the jobs for the men once they are demobilized.
Soldiers and sailors are being demobilized at the rate of 10,000 a day. Colonel Arthur Foods, assistant to the Secretary of War, whose job it is to get jobs for soldiers and sailors, advises the men to take their places as far as possible at their old line of work, and to jump off later to a better job.
