Minister of Justice Denies Having Liquidated American Property

Berlin, July 1. (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)-Germany has not liquidated American private or business property, Clemens Von Delbureck, acting Minister of Justice, told The Associated Press correspondence today. He declared that Germany did, on March 4, 1912, issue a ruling whereby the liquidation was permitted because America already had done the While America carried out this liquidation measure, the minister said that Germany never did so, but, on the contrary, merely regulated and ad-ministered American property. touched or violated American trade-marks," continued the minister. In the case of patents we distributed licenses for their use by Germans in five cases but we never declared American patents null or expired. "American patents and trademarks might be limited in Germany by an

It is estimated that it will cost the United States a billion dollars to maintain the price of wheat at $2.26 a bushel this year. If a man had spent $1 every minute of every hour, day and year since January 1, A. D. 1, until today, he would have spent only a little more than a billion dollars.

AMERICANS FINDING LONDON MUCH CHANGED

London, June 24.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Americans who have not been in London since the beginning of hostilities, but who are now here in large numbers, are finding many changes in the city and its instimany changes in the city and its institutions. Particularly is this true of the theaters and music halls where in other days they enjoyed the audience as much as they did the program.

One American went to the Alhambra the other night. There he had often seen the ballet, but there now he found a new world. There was a ballet, to be sure, but this time it was a Russian ballet. But what surprised him most was that between each ballet the excellent orchestra, conducted by a capable Russian, played classical music and the audience sat still and listened to it. Very few people left their seats, said the girls in the side rows did not ogle the young men in the stalls. There ween the performers and the audience than there usually is at a concert. It was not so in other days.

The audience, too, surprised him. It was of the thoughtful kind, and more fashionably gowned than before the war. Nearly every one, he observed, was in evening clothes, the women paying particular attention to the mode of the moment. A notice asked the au dience to "smoke as little as possible," and, as he remarked, there was no "vocal" evidence of the proximity of the bar.

In a one-time music hall where popular actress was being featured and where the sallies from the stage formerly were greeted with uproarious laughter, there was now nothing more apparent than good humored tolerance. "I suppose it is the war," he said, "for it is certain the Londoner is taking his pleasures much more seriously than when I was last here.'

And no mere man knows what it is
