BILL AND L.

ere's a little spot in the mountains, near a blue, white sky, ere Bill and I, Though we're not so sly, Catch fleecy clouds as they're floating

And we haven't a care that's half as deep down in a nost, where young birds

At dawn there's a shower of sunshine

Like you'll find in no other place; It makes dust of gold
And of diamonds mold,
It's the light of God's own face
As He smiles on the things men seem

In their haste to do what is soon

We've gathered the flowers together, Just Bill and I alone, Though we're growing gray, Our hearts still play In the rollicking brook that runs far Off to an unknown, voiceless, sea, Lifting our souls to eternity.

At duck I wait for the shadows, Thinking of Bill—he's dead— Dog and honest friend. Shame-faced and deep, I bend e-faced and deep, I bend My heart to your humble head. Hoping to meet my Master, as you will, Up on that highest seat, where all is
