

DANIELS ANSWERS COURTS' CRITICS

Natural Result of Such Criticism, Says Judge Is Rule of Mob

MAKES SPECIAL CHARGE TO WAKE GRAND JURY

Admits Occasional Instances of Miscarried Justice But Prefers That 99 Guilty Men Should Escape Rather Than That One Innocent One Should Be Punished

"Critics of the courts have probably not considered that if such criticism produces its natural result, nothing will stand between an assaulter and the mob," declared Judge Frank A. Daniels in a special charge to the grand jury at the opening of the May criminal term of Wake county Superior Court yesterday.

The charge was a direct reply to criticisms of the courts, and while couched in temperate language, vigorously defended the propriety of the courts. Attributing the bulk of criticism to misinformation or lack of information, Judge Daniels declared "the overwhelming majority of the verdicts rendered are in accordance with the law and evidence, and reach the real and essential justice of the cases in which they are rendered."

While admitting there are occasional instances of injustice, the judge asserted his belief in the principle that it is better that ninety-nine guilty men should escape than that one who is innocent should suffer.

Judge Daniels made specific reference to two cases tried in this State within the year both of which resulted in acquittals in serious loss of public confidence—the Snuggs case in this county and the case of Archer Farmer et al charged with criminal assault in Wayne county. In each instance, he unequivocally approved the verdict of the jury.

Praises Jurors.

Recording his observations as to the manner in which the average citizen performs his duty as a juror he said:

"The requirement of jury service ought to be reasonably construed and excuses allowed whenever their refusal would result in serious loss of public confidence. I believe this conviction arose in my mind and has existed there for more than a quarter of a century, because I observed that the average citizen drawn upon the jury had a real and a high sense of his responsibility for the performance of this duty, and that he seldom asked to be freed from it except upon grounds that appeared entirely reasonable. I know that the great body of our people partake of this sense of responsibility, and that, in spite of some undoubted incompetencies and hardships, they cheerfully discharge this important public duty. And, gentlemen, when I consider the small compensation of the juror, grand and petit, his willingness to make personal sacrifices and his conscientious purpose to take an honorable and highly useful part in the administration of the laws of his country and the ascertainment and the protection of the rights of his neighbors, I feel that probably more than most public officials he deserves the thanks of the court and his fellow citizens."

Advocates Change in Machinery.

After reviewing the many modifications that have been made in the rules of court practice in order to adjust the administration of the law to the requirements of modern conditions, Judge Daniels made one concrete suggestion for a further change in court procedure.

"While much progress has been made, much remains to engage our attention," he said. "Among other improvements I see no reason why it might not be wise to adopt the requirement of a unanimous verdict in ordinary civil actions and in prosecutions for minor criminal offenses. This would often obviate the inconvenience and delay of mistrials. But I should regard it as dangerous to permit other than a unanimous verdict under circumstances in which it might destroy reputation, endanger life or subject the citizen to an infamous or degrading punishment."

Another criticism to which Judge Daniels directed his attention was that the courts are unnecessarily slow in reaching justice. In reply to this criticism, he said: "The ascertainment of an assessment of the rights of those who resort to the courts requires time and deliberation, and dealing with the most important affairs in the lives of men, while requiring reasonable dispatch, does not safely lend itself to rapid transit methods."

While welcoming constructive criticism, he expressed the opinion that destructive criticism could only have the effect of making worse the conditions it sought to remedy.

Defends Snuggs Verdict.

Taking the Snuggs case, which was tried a few months ago in this country, he said:

"A citizen had been killed in his store at night under circumstances that led to the belief that his assailant while engaged in robbing the store had taken the life of the owner to secure his escape or to prevent identification."

"A witness in a preliminary investigation testified to facts, which is believed would demand the conviction of the accused. This witness on the trial in this court was examined by the State and testified that he knew nothing of the facts relating to the homicide and, upon being confronted with his former testimony, denied or professed not to remember it."

"Under these circumstances, the Solicitor was unable to proceed, the prisoner was acquitted, and there was criticism not of the jury, but of the law that permitted what many believed a flagrant miscarriage of justice."

"The critics, some of whom would, in their zeal, have abrogated the law of evidence governing the rejection of the former testimony of the witness did not know or did not stop to consider why it was that the law did not permit a conviction upon evidence which upon the trial of the prisoner the witness denied and repudiated."

"The rule of evidence forbids the conviction on previous statements of a prosecuting witness, though made under oath, and requires direct and personal testimony before the jury at the trial."

"The rule is entirely sound and reasonable and approved by every court in the United States and by every author who has written on the law of evidence, as well as by every man of ordinary intelligence who takes time to consider it."

"As a practical question it would have been next to impossible for a jury to decide upon the witness sworn falsely, if he had said so, or to permit a conviction, under the circumstances, would set a precedent for annulling a principle of evidence wisely designed for safeguarding the innocent man standing trial for his life."

Believes There Is Confidence In Courts.

Before closing the judge expressed the conviction that those who harshly criticize the courts do not truly realize the sentiment of the people of the State. In this connection, he said:

"I am sure you will agree with me that any reasonable prudent and well informed man prefers that his most important interests be decided by such a jury of his peers, under the sanction of an oath, having heard all the evidence from the lips of sworn witnesses, having seen them examined and cross examined in the effort to sift the truth from the false, having considered their character and knowledge and weight and judged their testimony, with all the help that the argument of counsel and the charge of the court can lend, rather than take the verdict of a tribunal composed of the ablest editors, bankers and business men or the most brilliant talkers of the street based upon inaccurate reports and flying rumors."

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR NOT THE LOGICAL MAN

Goldboro, May 3.—Cameron Morrison, of Charlotte, declared that the failure of the people of North Carolina in the past to elect a lieutenant governor to the governorship was not a mere hoodoo, in making a strong address in behalf of his candidacy for governor before a large audience at the county courthouse here tonight.

He said that the policy of not promoting the lieutenant governor to the governorship was founded in sound reason; that there was nothing in the duties of the lieutenant governor, who simply presides over the legislature, to train or equip him for the great office of governor; that the people knew it would be unwise precedent of promoting the lieutenant governor to the governorship, because if the precedent was once established it would result in selecting a governor indirectly four years ahead of time without regard to issues and purposes of the people at the time the governor was chosen.

Mr. Morrison spoke at Fremont in this county this afternoon speaking to a large crowd which gathered on the streets of the town. He was at Lillington and at Bailey's on Wednesday.

of the North Carolina General Assembly and special agent of the Census Bureau, today sent a telegram from Dunn to J. A. Poole, an agent of the Internal Revenue forces in North Carolina, congratulating him on being called to Washington to take intensive training for his enlarged duties.

"Congratulations you on being called to such high honors" wired Colonel Shell and opening the door of the knock of opportunity—added "tell Godwin he can keep easy. Things in very fine shape. Mr. Morrison is gaining ground fast. I am leaving no stone unturned for my friend."

"I am going to vote for Morrison but I am praying for Bob Page to win," modestly admitted Dr. W. B. Meacham, head of the osteopathic sanitarium at Asheville, in the office of Representative Zebulon Weaver this morning.

Outside the gubernatorial race, Dr. Meacham says there is little interest in politics. He had little to say with respect to the Overman-Brooks campaign. His reticence reminded Mr. Weaver of the statement of a well known North Carolinian a few days ago when asked as to his preference in the Overman-Brooks contest.

"I'm for Senator Simmons" replied the sage.

Hammer May Resign.

Efforts to confirm a persistent report about the Capitol yesterday and today that United States Attorney W. C. Hammer, of the Western District, is going to resign his office before the June primary were met with the answer that there is no more reason for Mr. Hammer to resign than there is for the head of the Department, Attorney General Palmer, to quit before the convention.

Nevertheless, it has been said by persons in a position to know that Mr. Hammer is going to have his name taken off the Federal payroll and make an intensive campaign against Senator mar grade or primary certificates which includes those who have had as much as two years of college training or have acquired the highest professional standing through years of service and study, 4,250 who hold elementary certificates, meaning that they have as much as a standard high school education and not more than one year of college training; 5,732 who hold second grade certificates indicating that they do not have as much as a standard high school education.

One More Normal School

Two hundred thousand white children of the State, Dr. Brooks pointed out, are taught by teachers of the last class and to meet the necessity for more teachers and better teachers, he urged the immediate planning of one more normal school like the East Carolina Teachers Training School, steps toward better high school instruction.

Pointing out that there are not a hundred graduate teachers in North Carolina who receive as much as $1,200 per year, Dr. Brooks maintained that a good teacher should certainly be paid as much as a good stenographer.

"It is the duty of the state," he continued, "to provide a minimum salary and it is the duty of the local districts, cities and the counties to increase that minimum just as high as the local needs may demand. The state should never fix a maximum salary. I shall ask the special session of the General Assembly, therefore, to establish a minimum salary for all classes of certificated teachers based upon training, professional skill and experience. If $1,200 is accepted by the General Assembly as a fair salary for all teachers of the highest class each succeeding General Assembly should assure the teachers that this salary will be increased annually until the teaching positions of the highest class pay as much as $1,900 or $2,000 a year.

All teachers below the highest class may by professional study raise their certificates to the next highest class which carries with it an increase in salary. The average salary for the teachers of these three classes is $110 a month for the first class, $85 a month for the second class, and $50 a month of the third class."

DR. WAY PREACHES INAUGURAL SERMON

Rector of St. Mary's At Diocesan Convention Discusses Interchurch Movement

Charlotte, May 4.—That the Masons, Red Cross and many other civic bodies have understood the value of unity far better than the church was the assertion of Rev. Warren W. Way, rector of St. Mary's school, Raleigh, in delivering the sermon inaugurating the 10th annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of North Carolina, in St. Peter's church today. Dr. Way dealt with the vital issues of the times. Referring to the interchurch movement he said: "There was a great conference held recently in this city, at which many denominations were represented. If that conference achieves its aim, it will have to adopt this rule of yielding a part of what one personally thinks proper and best, if it secures the unity of evangelistic purpose that it is seeking."

There are in attendance about 150 ministerial and lay delegates. The first business session was held this afternoon when a secretary and committees were named.

Rev. E. A. Penick reported for the committee of the diocese on the nationwide campaign, and Col. Albert Cox, on the Sevanee campaign.

Tonight Rt. Rev. J. B. Cheshire, presiding officer, delivered his annual address, followed by an address on the colored work by Bishop Henry Delany. Reports were submitted from the Charlotte and Raleigh convocations.

Tomorrow the convention will follow up work on the nationwide campaign with an address by Rev. I. S. Wood, of New York, representing national headquarters. This will be followed by a report on the Woman's Auxiliary, and by nominations with another business session in the afternoon.

At 8:30 at night there will be reports on St. Mary's school, Raleigh, and the Thompson orphanage, while a service will be held at the same hour at St. Michael's church, Colville, with Bishop Delany presiding.

After lunch Wednesday the convention will make a visit to St. Peter's hospital, the Thompson orphanage and the Good Samaritan hospital.

A medium crowd of circus devotees watched with disappointment yesterday the small and spiritless Walter L. Main Society Circus.

Last week, it was explained yesterday, the show was involved in a railroad wreck, resulting in the killing of some of the animals.

This could not explain the lack of major attractions, but it might account for the absence of "pep" shown in the two performances at Gattling's field yesterday.

The shows came here with little press notice and little bill boarding, but old friends of the old Walter L. Main attraction went out to see, saw, and came back sadder.
