

TWO STATES WILL ACT AT ONE TIME

Both North Carolina and Tennessee Legislatures Meet In August

BICKETT ASSURES WILSON OF HIS RECOMMENDATIONS

Forces of Anti-Ratificationists Divided by Simultaneous Action; North Carolina Legislature Will Likely Meet August 2nd and Tennessee On August 9th

The calling of the Tennessee Legislature to meet on August 9 to consider the ratification of the Susan B. Anthony amendment, and the possibility that the North Carolina General Assembly may not be called into session until that same day, has set up considerable speculation in administration circles here as to what may happen if both states attack this somewhat vexatious problem simultaneously.

On the face of the fact, it appears that the forces of the anti-ratificationists for many weeks centered here in Raleigh and waging a strenuous campaign against the amendment throughout the State, will be scattered. From the local offices of the anti-ratificationists already gone out appeals to the Governor of Tennessee, urging him to be deaf to those who would have him call a special session. It is understood that the rejectionists will establish headquarters in Nashville immediately, and a part of their workers will be sent across the Blue Ridge.

May Meet August 2.

Tentative agreement has been reached by the administration to call the North Carolina Legislature into special session on August 2, with a remote possibility that the opening may be moved up to July 27. The time hinges upon the State Tax Commission, and when it will be ready to advise the Governor that it is ready to present its program of revaluation. Governor Bickett said that he expected to know by next Monday when he would call the special session.

Considerable work yet remains to be done toward the revaluation of all the property in the State before the commission will be ready to tell the Legislature what the assessed wealth of the State is. More than 50 counties have been completed, and reports are coming in daily from the others. Commissioner Maxwell said yesterday that the work is progressing well, and that the bulk of the task now is completing the assessment of corporation property.

Replies To President.

Governor Bickett yesterday replied to the Wilson telegram with the statement that he expected to ask the special session to ratify the amendment, in accordance with his announcement March 15, when he wrote the ratification leader, Representative W. N. Everett that he would bow to the inevitable and request ratification.

Mr. Everett does not share the hope of many political leaders in the State that Tennessee will ratify before North Carolina has an opportunity, and is planning for a fight that he believes will overcome all opposition in the special session. The anti-ratificationists are equally active, and whatever the outcome of the measure in the state across the mountains, North Carolina will likely see the question threshed out on the floor of the legislature.

Governor Bickett's response to the President's letter follows:

"My dear Mr. President:

"I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your telegram in regard to the suffrage amendment. While this telegram does not seem to call for an answer, I gave to the press a statement that while I was not personally impressed with the wisdom of or the necessity for woman suffrage in North Carolina, I recognized its coming as inevitable and would advise the special session of our General Assembly that the sensible and graceful thing to do would be to accept the inevitable and promptly ratify the amendment. This is still my position.

"With great esteem, I beg to remain,

"Sincerely yours,

"T. W. BICKETT."
