Greensboro Husband Testifies Young Man Had Improper Relations With Wife

isboro, Aug. 23 .- As a result of home of Thomas Monroe, a well-known young white man of this city early yesterday morning, H. Marvin Holliday, an electrician at the sub-station of the Southern Power Company in this city, was bound over today to the September term of superior court under a bond of $1,000 to suswer a charge of an assault with a deadly weapon, this action following a preliminary hearing before Squire D. H. Collins this morning. A number of witnesses for both the State and defense were examined at the hearing which was largely attended, the large amount of interest taken in the case being due to the prominence of the Monroe family here.

Sunday morning about 8:15 o'clock, according to evidence at the hearing, Holliday went to the home of the Monroe youth on one of the main streets of the city, and asked to speak to him. After being asked to accompany him to a waiting automobile which was standing in front of the home, Monroe told Holliday that he was not dressed to go on the street. Thereupon, the defendant drew the gun and fired about four shots at the boy, the pistol, which was a Colt's revolver, snapping whan the gun was first drawn on the boy who is only 18 years of age. When the gun snapped, Monroe jumped behind the door facing, and was not struck by any of the chots which catered the wood work of the hall. Following the shooting, the defendant walked calmiy to the machine in front of the house, and ordered the driver to carry him to the county jail, where he surrendered to the jailer.

At the hearing this morning it was brought out that Monroe told another young white mann who works at the sub-station that he had had improper brought out that Monroe told another young white man who works at the sub-station that he had had improper relations with the wife of Holliday nearly a year ago. This young man to whom the facts was disclosed, informed Holliday of the matter Saturday afternoon while they were at work in the power bouse. Returning to his home near the station, Holliday testified today that he asked his wife as to the truth of the matter. She admitted fied today that he asked his wife as to the truth of the matter. She admitted clandestine relations with Monroe while on an auto ride with him last December, Holliday said, and that the intimacy with him was against her will. After spending a restless night at his home, Holliday testified that he arose early Sunday morning and made the trip to the Monroe home, where he fired the shots which narrowly missed causing a fatality.

That he fully intended to kill the young man was the assertion of Holliday who appeared on the stand with composure and told his version of the affair without the least show of nervaffair without the least show of nervousness. Only on the cross-examination when he was being questioned as to the alleged clandestine relations of his wife with the other man, did he show signs of becoming confused. He admitted that he had "instructed" her not to take attentions from other men. Evidence tending to show that the con-duct of his wife with other men was not proper, was brought out this morn-

Seemingly Mr. Breese was about to close without undue incident, although Bepresentative McNeill and his father had got red in the face. George McNeill arose with a question, to which Breese acquiesced. Over on the other side of the house, Captain McNeill was restraining himself with difficulty, and all over the character of the bill. After charging the Methodist United with hampering dancing masters in elevating the dance, the resolution said the house, Captain McNeill was restraining himself with difficulty, and all over the chamber the opponents of the bill dance as educational entertainment and repression. The air was tense. McNeill Makes Charge.

"Were you not a registrar in the pri-nary?" demanded George McNeill. "That hasn't got anything to do with t," fired back Breese. "Didn't you register 29 men between the first primary and the second?" con-tinued McNeill, sdvaneing down the aisle toward Breese.

"You told me you did," persisted the representative.

"You are a liar!" shouted the lawyer.
The battle began. McNeill rushed at Breese and the lawyer struck the legis-lator in the face. McNeill's eye glasses were torn off. The two grappled, Breese taking a head lock over the lightweight house member, pounding him over the back with a free hand and McNeill returning the blows to the lawyer's stom-ach. Robert Strange McNeill, brother of George, rusied in and fell into the clutches of a brother to Breeze. Another Breese had another McNeill in a head lock.

Captain McNeill quit his chair with a leap and landed in the middle of the fray. He covered the distance between where he was sitting and the point half way between the press desk and the enway between the press desk and the catrance to the chamber in about two seconds and landed a heavy blow in A. B. Breese's eye. By that time, a score of the opposing faction had joined in. F. A. Marsh, a heavyweight farmer from the lower end of Cumberland, covered a couple of senatorial desks with single leap and landed in the midst of the melee, but some neutral grabbed him before he could land effectively.

Sergeant-at-arms Gaster came bellowing down the aisle threatening the combatants with his crutch, but they heeded neither his stentorian words nor the threatenings of his uplifted means of colonel Cox pointed out that at the end of the time when the railroads, under the thirty-day notice, should have issued tariffs in accordance with the commission's order, they filed a potition to rehear, striking again at the very heart of the North Carolina contention and denying the finding of the commission that there had been contention and denying the finding of the Captain and carried him off, somethe commission that there had been body else had George McNeill, and two other spectators deprived Marsh of a long wished for opportunity to deal mightily with the Cumberland repre-sentative. The booming voice of Senator Stacy was lifted above the tumult, moving an executive session. The little less powerful voice of Senator Connor put the motion, and if there were any noes they were lost. Sergeant-at-Arms Gaster took the cue and drove the combatants forth. There was no demonstration, save the remark of Captain McNeill that "it is just what we wanted," and from Sergeant-at-Arms Gaster the refaliation that if "he is going to have the floor, I want a chance to reply." Mr. Gaster's son is treasurer of the county, and father and son were desperately opposed to the McNeill bill. The crowd melted away and half an hour later none of the combatants save George McNeill was to be found about the usual haunts of visitors to the city. So far no action has been taken to bring them into the courts. Nobody whose memory is available recollects any such occurrence in the history of the General Assembly. Long years ago there was a fight between two members on the floor of the House, but never before, with its long record of bitter contests, has the committee on countries, cities and towns, or any other ommittee, witnessed a free-for-all.
