TOO BIG MAJORITY IN CONGRESS FOR THE REPUBLICANS

Not Enough Places of Honor to Go Around and Harding Must Worry
SENATE OVERCROWDED WITH NEWLY ELECTED
Chairman Will Hays Will Be Very Much in Demand in Washington After March 4; Senator Pat Harrison Believes Democratic Party in Excellent Shape

The News and Observer Bureau, 503 District National Bank Bldg. (By Special Leased Wire.)
Washington, Nov. 6.—The huge, unwieldy dimensions of the Republican majorities in both houses of Congress are worrying the Republicans no more than the slim size of the Democrats is pestering that party. President-elect Harding is said to be giving more serious thought to the bulky proportions of his party in Congress than to any other present aspect of the situation.
