highway commission together for the first meeting on April 4.

In this connection, Governor Morrison issued a statement which reads:

"The recent news about the delay in the matter of issuing and selling bonds with which to build the roads is most vidiousless.

"The law does not go into effectuatil the first day of April, because Board & Commissioners canno be legally organized until that date, and the law further provides that I shall call the board within sixty days of course, it could not have been done the enactment of the law, but, before the first of April. The first of April is on Friday, and in order that the commissioners, who will have to be in session for several days, may not away from home on Sunday, I have called them to meet on Monday, the

"There has not been any discord disagreement between the Council of er other officers and myself. I have had the most hearty co-operation, sympathy and helpful advice since I was inaugurated from every one of the Council of State and of the other State officers. There is no hostility on their part to me, I am quite sure. There been no disagreement over any proposition to borrow money for roads There is rb disagreement between Mis re disagreement between Mr. Frank Page and myself, but upon the with my view that the great problem of providing funds and determining when and how to proceed to construct roads should await the organization of the new commission. The attempt to picture me and the Council of State as embroiled in an unseemly row is without any foundation, and the mere creations of malignant men who wish this was the case."

The opinion quickly dismissed a con-tention that the word "income" as used in the 16th amendment did not include the gain, realized by a single trans-action but only profits realized by one engaged in buying and selling as a The reasoning used in the case of the Ryerson estate was held to cover fully the court's decision in the appeal brought by David M. Goodrich, of New Fork, involving taxation of profits on investment capital, except that in one transaction Mr. Goodrich showed an actual loss from the price he had paid for the securities. The ruling of the tax assessors that the value as of March 1, 1913, which was below the cost price in 1912 and the subsequent sale price in 1916, only would be considered reversed by the Supreme court.

No Tax Without Gain. "The act under which the tax was seessed provides that the net income the individual shall include 'gains' and 'profits' ' the epinion said. "Thus it is very plain that this statute imposes the ncome tax on proceeds of personal property to the extent only that gains derived therefrom and since ne gain was derived on this transaction, no dor.

In the third case settled today Walsh, Collectors, vs. Brewster—the same points were considered. Elimination of the March 1, 1913, 'npact line" through today's opinions was in conformation with the voluntary action taken by the government's advocates during the argument of the eases. Solicitor General Frierson that time "confessed error" so far as tax assessments had been made on apparent profits figured from March 1 1913, when a comparison with the pur chase price showed the investor to have suffered an actual loss. For purposes of computing the proportion of profits essed, however, that date forth in the 1916 statute still stands under the court's ruling.

"No man among the Baptists of the State has occupied a more prominent place during his long life, than Dr. Hutham. No one has attended more onwentions and associations than he did. He was a supervisor of all the gatherings he attended. He was gladly accorded a seat in them all, but he never occupied it. He was on his feet all the time, going here and there among his brethren like St. John of old, with kind salutations and affectionate greeting. Thus it came to pass among his people—a people that had no hishops—be came to be known as the 'Baptist Bishop.' Indeed he had a unique place among his brethren. I can see him new as he moyed among

The scene was like that of a State fair in Raleigh, plus the crowd, that gathers on circus day for the parade, vendors of pea-nuts, toy balloons, Easter chicks and Easter eggs, crying their wares on the edge of the crowd and making headway in it. There was no discrimination on acount of race or color on the White House grounds, for in the crowd doing the egg rolling there were blacks and yellows as well as white children. Warning to Farmers.

Here is a "look out! warning!" to the farmers of the South from their friend. The indications are that there is soon to be a boost given to the prices of cotton, and perhaps of tobacco. Its purpose, say these who are keeping tab on the market and erop conditions, is to use this boost in order to get the farmers to plant larger acreage in cotin screnge reduction plans, with the hope that this plan of procedure will give low priced cotton and tobacco ingther season. It will be wise to keep this in mind as crops are being planted remembering that the men who are advising as great as a 50 per cent de crease in cotton acreage and in tobacco ereage, are men who have at heart the interests of the planters of the
