MRS. RICHARD C. BADGER PASSES TO REST

Much Beloved Lady Claimed By Death; Funeral From Christ Church 'comorrow

Yesterday afternoon at 6:30 o'clock Mrs. Bettie Austin Badger, widow of Major Richard C. Budger, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel F. Telfair, in Cameron Park, Raleigh.

The maiden name of Mrs. Badger wa Bettie Alexander Austin. She was born at "Dalkeith," her father's summer home in Warren county, on the 13th day of September, 1844. Her father was Colonel Alexander A. Austin, and her mother, prior to her marriage, was Martha Williams Joyner.

Many hearts in Raleigh and else-where will be saddened by the passing of Mrs. Badger. Few lives have been ent here that gave more unstintingly of themselves or more freely of things which count in the sum of he man happiness; and the thoughtful consideration and deeds of kindness which so many have felt at her hands will make an abiding place for her memory in their minds and hearts. If there was one trait predominant above others in her character it was loyaltyloyalty to her family, loyalty to her friends, loyalty to her church.

Born amid affluent surroundings, her d was spent at "Dalkeith" "Woodlawn," country seats of her fam-ily in Warren and Halifax counties, in environment in every way typical of the Old South and its best traditions. tutorage and entering St. Mary's School. Ruleigh, she remained at that institution under the fatherly oversight of its revered founder, Dr. Aldert Smedes, for a period of five years. Her education was completed in New York at the cele-brated school of Miss Haines and Madam de Janon, an institution which enjoyed the patronage of many promiment American families.

Her father having died while she was yet a child, and her mother having married the late Colonel Frank P. Haywood, of Raleigh, the family removed from "Woodlaws," their Hallfax coun-try home, to "Silver Spring," on the northeastern suburbs of Raleigh, a fine estate long remembered as the scene of many gay festivities and as an abode of gracious hospitality. Possessing unusual personal beauty, together with rare social charm, she quickly became a part of the brilliant coterie of belles who reigned in Raleigh in the early 'sixties. In 1865 she was united in marriage with Major Richard Cogdell Budger, formerly an officer on the staff of General Junius Daniel in the Confederate Army, and a lawyer who inherited in a marked degree the brilliant intellect and legal capacity of his distinguished father, Senator George E.

Mrs. Badger's deeply religious nature found expression in the manifold agencies and activities of her church. A lifetime member of the Episcopal Church, well instructed in its tenets, and fortified in her last hours by its rites and sacraments, her long life of unselfishness and devotion came peace-

Surviving Mrs. Badger is her daugh-ter and only child, Mrs. Samuel F. Telfair; also two gisters, Mrs. Sally Austin Hamilton, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Minnie Haywood Bagley, of Washington, D. C., and an only brother, Mr. Frank P. Haywood, of Raleigh.

The funeral will take place from Church Church tomorrow afternoon a

But I must not say,
A word of it to another
Now I didn't think she would care

If I just told my brother. He said he would not tell at all,
But he whispered it to his friend Paul
Although in a quite confidential way,
That he had heard it said
Daisy Jones would never wed
She had written a play.

New Paul did, As most men will, cent home and told his sister Lil, That Daisy Jones had gone away
To take a part in a leading play.
The next time I saw Duisy,
She was not only in tears
But on the verge of going srang.

DURHAM HOSIERY MILLS RECEIVE HUGE ORDER

Durham, April 4.—The Durham Hos-iery Mills this morning received one of the largest orders for hosiery-in the history of the mills. The order comes from New York, but the name of the concern giving th ode was not made public. To take care of the increased business, the mills are making preparations for adding and ball help to its office force.

The mills of the city are now taking on renewed life by the continuous number of new orders being received and it is hoped to have all the depart-ments of the different mills running in a short while. The recent lower ing of its prices on finished products no doubt has something to do with the recent large orders, though the quality and superiority of the Durham Hosiery Mills' products is known the world over
