

Russian Cabinet Officer Will Be Chautauqua Speaker Tonight

Dr. Gregory Zilboorg, Kerensky Labor Minister, To Give His Views

DR. GREGORY ZILBOORG

IS NO RED RUSSIAN BUT COMES WITH NEW STORY

Yesterday's Program Featured By Drew Pearson and Nothing But The Truth

TODAY. Afternoon—Lecture—Chautauqua Superintendant, Concert McGrath-Knox Entertainers, Junior Chautauqs. Evening—Concert, McGrath-Knox Entertainers, Lecture—"Russia in Revolution"—Dr. Gregory Zilboorg.

Twenty-eight years is a very much longer time in Russia than it is anywhere else in the world, longer than two generations in America, if time be measured by the flow of events. In that brief span one may have witnessed the dissolution of civilization, have seen an ocean of blood flow, have stood by when dynasties perished, and may have seen a whole nation go mad.

In a lifetime measured by the passage of no more than twenty-eight birth days one may have had part in these things. Not the part of a private in the ranks of revolution, but the part of a leader. So had Dr. Gregory Zilboorg, leader of the revolution fourteen years ago, under secretary of labor in the Kerensky cabinet at the age of 26, and fugitive from the Bolsheviks at 29.

Dr. Zilboorg came to Raleigh yesterday, and tonight will speak of his fatherland at the Swarthmore Chautauqua. Eighteen months ago he came to America. In his lifetime he had acquired degrees from three Russian universities, spoke five languages, but he knew no English. Those who hear him tonight will scarcely believe it. He speaks it without accent that is noticeable.

In Not Red Russian. The Doctor is not a red Russian. He was a follower of the Kerensky government that undertook to set up democracy on the ruins of the Romanoff dynasty. How grievously they failed, and why, he will tell his hearers tonight.

How far short have the writers who have seen his dying country failed in their effort to grasp the causes that have moved it to destruction, he will tell them, and the way of the road that will one day lead his people out of the dark.

No doubt the lecture will be of absorbing interest to hundreds who have wondered what is the matter in Russia. No doubt even more interesting would be his own personal story, had he a week to tell it. Few men in the world have seen such things as have come under his eyes since he was a student in Petrograd university.

As a physician in a military hospital he saw the crumbling of Russia's imperial government in 1917; as a representative of the Kerensky government he watched from the trenches the June, 1917 offensive against Germany; he saw the collapse of the Russian army, the downfall of the Kerensky government, the rise of the red tide of Bolshevism, and was in the little Russian town where the Tsar and his family were murdered.

All of these things he saw, and was a part of. As a member of the Kerensky government, he was hated by the Bolsheviks, and his flight from Russia would read like a dime thriller. Leaving all that behind him, at 27 years of age he came to America. He is a profound student, a lawyer, a doctor, and a philosopher. He has written books, he has lectured in several of the foremost universities in America. He will become an American.

Being neither a supporter of the dynamic rule in Russia, nor of the mob rule of the Bolsheviks, Dr. Zilboorg views the history of his country from a neutral ground. His lecture tonight will deal with a subject that perplexes the chancelleries of the world, and no doubt will be heard with profound interest. He went last night to Durham for his first lecture with the Chautauqua.

Afternoon Program. Yesterday afternoon, with a preliminary musical program by the Pilgrim Entertainers that in every way maintained the high standard of the Chautauqua music, Drew Pearson delivered an illustrated lecture on "The New Power in Southern Europe."

It was a story of the Balkans, their history and customs, their problems and their future, that the young lecturer, who has been engaged in Serbian relief work for two years, brought to the Chautauqua audience.

Not the least interesting feature of the lecture, however, was its illustration. A patented daylight screen, with the machine operated from the rear of the speaker and thrown on a screen by his side, made it possible to dispense with the usual dark room lecture, where the speaker is shrouded in darkness and the audience is suffocated with heat. Not even the tent sides were lowered and the lecturer explained his pictures in the same light that the Pilgrim Entertainers gave their program.

Incidentally, the lecturer presented to the audience a native Serb, the man who operated the picture machine, and who was one of the army of 50,000 boys, most of whom perished in their long mountain march to the sea at the beginning of the war.

The speaker graphically pictured conditions, dwelt upon the fact that the Balkan states are fighting states because the Turks and later the Austro-

Hungarians, in their policy of subjugation, instilled into the smaller states a deep hatred of one another, thereby keeping them in almost perpetual war and weakness.

Following it came the Junior Chautauqs, attended by a fine crowd of youngsters, who played and sang under the direction of the Junior trector. Tonight, William E. Thompson, Chautauqua superintendent, announced, he will present to Raleigh the newly elected mayor of the Junior City, Virgil St. Cloud, Jr.

"Nothing But the Truth." "Nothing But the Truth" kept the night crowd, larger by several hundred than any thus far, a-giggle for two hours beginning at 8:30. It is a very clever comedy, not unknown to most of the play-goers hereabouts, and the Comus Players presented it very acceptably. Any pretensions attempt at scenic effect in a chautauqua tent is, of course, impossible but the competency of the casts compensated for this deficiency.

The plot involves a wager on the part of Bob Bennett that he can tell the whole truth for a period of 24 hours. The bet is taken, and ensues a vast expenditure of effort to induce him to tell even a small white lie that will surrender the wager, a little matter of ten thousand dollars. All of which involves all of the participants, their families and their friends in a period of profound embarrassment, happily ended with the expiration of the 24 hours. Bennett is enabled to lie slightly and cut a gordian knot of impending disaster.

Bennett is played by Harold Vermilye, a name not unfamiliar to readers of metropolitan dramatic reviews. The three conspirators to have him stray off the narrow path of veracity were done by Franklin Rosseller, Glenn Williams and Joe Williams. The wife of the chief conspirator, Mrs. Bala-ton, is done by Marian Ewart, Bennett's girl by Edyth Barlow, with two minor parts taken very well by Amy Forsworth and Sigurd Ekloff.

The McGrath-Knox Entertainers, an organization built around the McGrath brothers, specialists with banjos, will be the feature of the program this afternoon, and again tonight, with the added attraction of Dr. Gregory Zilboorg who speaks on "Russia in Revolution." With the McGrath-Knox Entertainers will be Miss Hazel Knox, vocalist, and Alderson Moberg, pianist.

In the afternoon the three went out to see "Babe" Ruth make a home run, but "Babe" failed them.

Goldsboro Heiress Seeking Divorce From Kentucky Man

Christina. She continued to live in Owensboro until March 12, 1920, when she left her husband.

Mrs. Massie reiterated on cross-examination that practically all of their arguments were over Ellis' alleged drinking.

"Did you drink any when you were living with him?" asked Mr. Iglehart. "The first year and a half of my married life, for the betterment of my physical condition, because I was being exposed to every insult and by having a pistol drawn on me," she replied.

"Dressed Man She-Loved. But she married the man she loved, she said.

"And I think I had pretty strong love to overcome and forgive all that he did," she added.

"Now I don't care to be married to anyone. I know too much about it."

Mrs. Massie said she met her husband in August, 1917, when he was in Goldsboro learning the tobacco business.

She went with him several weeks and then returned to school and they wrote each other. Soon after the death of her father in March 1920 she wrote him telling of her father's death.

"I asked him what he was doing and told him I was interested in him. So in about three weeks he came down to North Carolina," she said. They became engaged when he arrived and were married within less than a month on May 7.

They went to Baltimore on their honeymoon and then to Owensboro. They made their home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Massie on South Frederick Street. There, according to Mrs. Massie, the trouble began between her and her husband when he began drinking.

When her husband cursed her she hit him; he would hit her back but never hard enough to knock her down she said.

Husband Makes Denial. Her husband made a general denial of all charges of his wife, with the exception of admitting that he quarreled. Furthermore he denied his father, R. E. Massie, was as wealthy as reputed and said his wife was worth $250,000 with a $15,000 income. Therefore, he said she need not alimony.

Mrs. Massie countered with the allegation that her husband "has large expectations of wealth being the only child of parents worth approximately $1,000,000."

Judge Slack is expected to render a decision within a day or two. The case on trial for several days has attracted widespread attention here, owing to the social prominence of families.

PAYING THE FIDDLER. Statistics show that mills pay about $200,000,000 more for cotton than Southern farmers get. In addition to this farmers lose on under-grading and country damage many millions each year. North Carolina's share of these losses is estimated at $30,000,000, and a lot of this is spent outside of the State. The antiquated system of dumping cotton on the market, which results in these losses, is the reason why the growers are organizing a co-operative marketing association to sell their cotton in an intelligent, business-like way. "Why not keep some of these millions at home?" ask the leaders of the co-operative movement, who point out that when the farmer prospers everyone else is prosperous.

Henry Society had charge of the program on May 27, which consisted of a recitation contest, and a debate. The graduating exercises of the senior class took place on May 28. The literary address by Rev. J. E. Abernethy, of Salisbury, was one of the most brilliant and inspiring ever delivered in Mocksville. The lamentations of the class were read by Jamie Moore, the class president; the diagnosis, by Roger Stewart; class history, by Miss Hazel Baitry; class prophecy, by Miss Kathryn Brown; and class will, by Miss Margaret Thompson. All five of the seniors are planning to enter college this fall.

OVER THOUSAND FINISH AT WOMAN'S COLLEGE

Greensboro Institution Completes Its 29th Year Of Regular Work

Greensboro, June 1.—The North Carolina College for Women, according to the new catalogue which has just come from the press, now has a total of 1,143 alumnae, or 1,224, including the class which is to be graduated next week. The present year brings to an end the 29th year of regular work, the college having opened for classes in October, 1893. The largest class which has been graduated so far was the class of 1920, with a total of 88 members. The entire roll of alumnae by classes is published in the new catalogue.

The catalogue shows also that there were registered during the year just ending 784 students in the regular session and 667 in the summer school session of 1920, making a total for 1920-1921 of 1,451 students. The faculty now numbers 81, and the officers of administration 28. The freshman class was unusually large the past year, embracing 365 members, a striking evidence of the increasing numbers in the State seeking college education.

In keeping with the practice of other standard college, the entrance requirements for next year will be 15 units, according to the standard methods of measurement. Many new courses will

SAYS SHE CAN EAT ANYTHING

Mrs. Searce, After Taking Tanlac, Enjoys Things She Had Not Touched in Years

"Since taking Tanlac I can eat anything I want for the first time in fifteen years without suffering afterwards," said Mrs. C. B. Searce, of 165 1-2 Stokes street, Danville, Va.

"I had become so weak from the effects of indigestion that I couldn't do my housework and seemed to be getting worse all the time. Nothing I ate agreed with me, and often for days at a time I couldn't retain a thing on my stomach. I was so nervous I couldn't sleep hardly at all, and at times I was so tired, weak and dizzy I could hardly raise my head from my pillow.

"None of my family thought I would ever get over my trouble, but about this time one of my daughters began taking Tanlac, and when I saw how it helped her I made up my mind to try it myself. My system was so badly out of order and I was so weak I couldn't tell Tanlac was helping me until after I started on my third bottle. But after that I got better right along. My appetite is now fine and everything agrees with me so well that my friends are simply astonished at my improvement. I sleep like a child and am always feeling fine. Tanlac is the grandest medicine in the world and I wouldn't think of being without it."—adv.

be offered in the several departments of the college. Among these courses may be mentioned sanitary bacteriology, medical microscopy and chemistry, courses in English literature of the 17th and 18th centuries, a new course in journalism, contemporary European history, 1870-1920, a new French course dealing with France and its people, two new courses in Spanish to meet the increased demands for this subject, and a new department of health.

The case was heard by Assistant Judge Batloff in city court. The indictments grew out of an episode between policeman and military officer in court room yesterday.
