

CAN'T FIND SUNDAY LAW IN STATUTES

Representative Says it Passed Legislature, Senator Declares It Did Not

Fayetteville, Aug. 11.—Cumberland county does not know whether it is blue or not. Representative E. J. Kennedy, this county's member of the Lower House of the last Legislature, says that his amendment to the North Carolina Sunday statute passed the general assembly, while Dr. J. S. McGougan, State Senator from the Thirtieth district, does not think the amendment went through. It is not in the official publication of the public laws. If the amendment is operative Fayetteville and Cumberland county will become as blue as old Con-hecticut ever was at its bluest. If it is not the community will continue to wag along at its present gait of mild waywardness under the old Sunday statute that served the fathers.

"Replying to our several communications," Mr. Laroque says in his letter, "I have to advise that in my opinion North Carolina is extremely fortunate in having among her representatives in Congress and the Senate at least two gentlemen who are recognized by their party as experts on tariff matters. Under the leadership of these two distinguished North Carolinians one of whom was at the head of the Senate finance committee and the other at the head of the ways and means committee of the House this country and especially North Carolina enjoyed the greatest era of prosperity ever known. "I have absolute confidence in the ability of Hon. E. M. Simmons who is yet a member of the Senate finance committee and Hon. Claude Kitchen who is still on the ways and means committee of the House to handle all matters pertaining to tariff and revenue and am not willing to nos withdraw the proxy which I gave them last fall when I voted for them and place it in the hands of any man or set of men whose views on tariff and revenue matters are sectional and whose ability to draft a tariff bill in two days is at least questionable in my mind. "Feeling as I do that the tariff question should be considered from a national viewpoint and again reconfirming my confidence in our representatives who have already proven themselves wise leaders in troublesome times I can not endorse the resolution."

No New Public Buildings

W. E. Reynolds, commandant, has issued an announcement that the United States coast guard will hold a competitive examination for appointment of cadets and cadet engineers, the latter part of December, 1921. Cadets are trained to become line officers and the age limits for appointment are 18 to 24 years. Representative Weaver was today notified by Representative John W. Langley, chairman of the public buildings and roads committee, that his committee would not consider any bills for public buildings during this session of Congress. Mr. Weaver has a number of bills embracing building projects, as has every other member of the Tar Heel delegation, and the announced determination to put all these aside will be a sore disappointment to many of the people in North Carolina.

LEAGUE NOT DEAD, EDITOR DECLARES

(Continued From Page One.) reasonably soon. If not, all friends of the league must organize so as to capture Congress in 1922 and the Presidency in 1924. They must tread the path of the opponents of slavery, who continued fighting even though election after election went against them. "Nearly all the Democrats and more than half the Republicans—a clear majority of the American people—want the United States to enter some kind of an association with enough teeth in its arsenal to lessen the probabilities of war. They can win if they unite." Give Property to Church At today's meeting of the laymen's Week Conference it was decided to turn the Lake Junaluska property over to the M. E. Church, South, the presentation to be made at the next session of the general conference to be held May, 1922, at Hot Springs, Ark. "Christian principles in international relations" was the theme discussed today by Bishop Cannon of Birmingham, Josephus Daniels, who spoke on Christian principles as related to war, sin and peace. Dr. Wm. E. Dodd of the University of Chicago spoke on the Great War and American Intervention.

(Continued from page one.) to Chairman Page. Lack of available equipment, difficulty in securing capable men, and the slowness of some counties to get their road maps finally approved have somewhat hampered the work of organization, but these difficulties are being rapidly eliminated. Every mile of road is expected to be maintained before September 1.

Page Finds Improvement

Just back from the trip through the western part of the State, Mr. Page said yesterday that he had a remarkable improvement in the road test are being worked out by the State. Despite the fact that the road test is very difficult, he found them to be a good deal better than he had expected. Improvement of maintenance organization will bring even more remarkable improvement in road conditions.

Organization has been formed with the district as a unit and the State roads divided into sections in such manner that they can be kept up with the minimum of travel by maintenance gangs. Several hundred motor trucks are being used, as fast as they can be put in condition for work by the mechanical division. Altogether, the State has about 600 existing trucks and expects to have several hundred more.

Insanity Plea of Mrs. Jernigan On Trial In Sampson

(Continued from Page One) than two hours, the whole panel had been secured. It is a superb body of men. The State brought out the same evidence it did at the preliminary trial. The defense seemed to work to show that the scene of the killing was within 15 yards of the thick river sweep and that the crime might have been done by a hidden person. But when the State rested and Mrs. Jernigan was called as the first witness the situation was crossed and the defense through Major Butler made known its plea of insanity. The State objected strenuously, arguing through Stringfield that the law did not recognize emotional insanity and citing the Thomasville case to show that a former condition of mental disease must be established to make the plea hold in this event. It looked as if the State was up against it. It finally admitted that it had no defense unless it could show the condition of the defendant's mind at the time of the crime. The judge ordered Mrs. Jernigan Tell Story On the last Sunday in April the mother had seen the girl partly undressed and discovered her condition. Mrs. Jernigan told the jury. She had taken her apart and talked with her. She said it was Sewell and that he had caught her in his yard one day and carried her into the stable and forced her. The defendant had sought to misunderstanding and to seek ground for agreement as to principles and their application. It is the earnest wish of both government that through an interchange of views with the faculties of a warfarmer, it may be possible to find a solution of Pacific and Far Eastern problems of international importance at this time that will be common understanding and respect matters which have been and are of international concern. It may be possible to secure a more intimate acquaintance between the two peoples.

It is not the purpose of the government to attempt to increase the scope of the discussion on points as to the Pacific and Far Eastern questions, but rather to leave this to the subject of suggestions to be exchanged between the two peoples. It is the hope of the government that the spirit of the discussion and a mutual appreciation of the importance of the elimination of causes of controversy will govern the final decision.

"Accordingly, in pursuance of the proposal which has been made, and in the light of the general intention of its acceptance, the President invites the government of Great Britain to participate in a conference on the subject of international armament, in connection with the League of Nations, and the President will also be pleased to receive in Washington on the 15th day of November, 1921."

keep it a secret. She thought of sending her to her brother in Virginia, but sent her to the rescue in Columbia. She learned with maddening effect that the story was out. She could not eat or sleep. On the morning of the homicide she had got a letter telling her of the child's birth. She scarcely remembered going.

She recalled seeing her husband that morning but did not remember taking the gun to the house. She did not know that she had shot Ruby, but did recall that he told her that Ruby was following in the steps of her mother and that it would as well be as any body else. She soon learned that Ruby was still alive, seeing the folks gathering there. She could not remember much about the day but the mother's inquiry was taken to the girl. It was out on the same occasion that Stringfield that she likes to shoot squirrels and goes out on the range.

A second diversion occurred in the course of the trial. It was but as far as a good lady became excited and told the jury that she meant to be. Well, so on Ruby and man is the cause of it. "Stand by the woman, stand by the woman," she should a dozen times or so made her way down the crowded court room, everybody making way for her and Judge Dixon as much surprised and amused as anybody.
