MARYLAND SHUTS DOWN ON CATTLE

Dismantling of Quarantine Pens Affects Livestock Owners In North Carolina

Elizabeth City Independent.

The recent order of the Maryland State Board of Agriculture closing that state to shipments of ticky cattle and the dismantling of quarantine pens at Baltimore and Frederick, Md., in the District of Columbia and at Wilmington, N. C., affects the owners of 120,000 to 200,000 head of free range cattle in twenty-two Eastern North Carolina counties in a way that should cause alarm.

It means that on January 1, 1922, when the state-wide stock law goes into effect the owners of these free range cattle will find every outside market closed to them except the markets of Norfolk and Richmond, and Norfolk and Richmond cannot begin to handle the scrub cattle that must be sold at that time.

The owners of 150,000 to 200,000 head of scrub cattle in Eastern North Carolina will have to dispose of this stock because it is not profitable to take it up and feed it. Free range cattle are profitable only so long as they forage for themselves and live on the public domains and in the wood and fields of others than their owners.

The owners of these cattle were put on notice last February that they would have to do something with this stock by January 1, 1922.

The order closing the stock yards of Maryland to North Carolina cattle follows: "On and after this date (June 11) no cattle originating in any area under Federal quarantine on account of southern splenic, or Texas fever shall be transported or driven into Maryland, and transportation companies are hereby notified not to accept shipments of such cattle when consigned to any point in this State."

As a result of this order the Southern Cattle Quarantine pens at the Union Stock Yards at Baltimore, and J. A. Whildin Company, Frederick, Md., have been dismantled and disinfected. Similar action is being taken at the Benning Stock Yards at Benning, D. C., and at the Carolina Packing Company at Washington, N. C.

The plight of the owners of these cattle is distressing. It is going to mean an immediate economic loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars to Eastern North Carolina. The fact that stock law means an eventual economic gain of millions does not offset the fact that at the very outset Eastern North Carolina owners of 150,000 to 200,000 head of scrub cattle are going to find themselves without a market for something that must be gotten rid of.

It will be a great economic crime to shoot down these cattle, and sell them for fertilizer or leave them to rot. But they are not desirable for food. The only outside demand for this class of stock has come from the makers of bologna and frank from sausages.

MONSTER WATERMELON AT COMMERCIAL BANK

Nightly - three - pounder From Edgecombe To Be Sliced Tuesday Morning

"Whoppie," may not be in Nisch Webster's compilation of the words in the English language, but in that month's time she didn't raise water-melons like the one on exhibition in the Commercial National Bank yesterday.

There was no particular need of such a word. None other will do to describe E. R. Crow's melon. It weighs 81 pounds on a very conservative pair of scales, and a bushel basket would scarce suffice to hold it.

It came from down in Edgecombe county. Tuesday morning it will be out in the lobby of the bank, and a slice passed out to any who may want a taste of it.
