WILSON JUMPS TO LEAD ON THIRTIETH BALLOT

For the First Time He Gets More Votes Than Clark--Indiana Made First Break On 28th Ballot--New York Delegate Attacks Bryan

DELEGATES ALL ARE DETERMINED

Convention Began the Day's Session Without Any Prospect of a Break in the Deadlock--To All Outward Appearance the Friends of the Different Candidates Will Stay With Their Choice All the Week, Or Longer if Necessary--Underwood's Friends More Confident Than They Have Yet Been of His Ultimate Selection--Leaders Can Make No Forecasts.

Baltimore, July 1.—There was no prospect of an immediate break of the deadlock over the presidential nomination, when the democratic national convention began its sixth day's session.

Wilson's chances to win the nomination were believed to depend on his ability to continue the steady accretion his vote has shown since the Nebraskan announced his support.

New York will continue supporting Clark during the balloting today, according to Charles F. Murphy. Murphy said: "No caucus has been held. I am unable to say what the delegates will do if the deadlock continues beyond today.

Bryan's attack upon New York state will have no effect. Our delegates will vote as the majority directs, without reference to Bryan's position or wish."

Many leaders thought there was little likelihood of a nomination today. They believe the controversy between Clark and Bryan has stirred up such strife between their respective supporters that neither side would yield far enough to make a material difference.

Underwood's friends went into the convention more confident than ever that Underwood would be the ultimate choice. They admitted there would have to be a decided turn toward him as a compromise candidate once the big fight is settled.

The delegates held the fragile hope that the first few ballots today would cause sufficient splits among the instructed delegates to break the deadlock.

William J. Bryan's announced opinion that he could see no reason why the convention would not nominate today, was not shared by party leaders, who frankly admitted they could not see their way to concede that the deadlock would be broken today.

Vice-Chairman Hall, of Nebraska, said: "I believe we will be here all the week. Certainly I do not look for a nomination for two or three days."

There were no overnight changes in the situation. Not the faintest indication existed that any of the candidates' managers would consent to a compromise.

The Clark, Wilson and Underwood leaders fear most the naming of a "dark horse." This has often been the history of deadlocked conventions.

Clark Delegates Meet. The Clark advisory and executive committees and the delegates from the staunch Clark states, held a meeting this morning.

By 10 o'clock the galleries were half filled and many delegates were on the floor. A cool breeze through the high transoms kept the banners fluttering and promised relief from the heat of the previous sessions.

Eagerness was everywhere manifested over the struggle. Speculation was abundant as to whether the deadlock would be broken and on the possibility of further sensational coups.

The prevailing sentiment was that the lines were tighter than ever. It was recognized that the convention has been so replete with sensational scenes that a break might come any time.

Among the early arrivals there was a disposition to view Bryan's move against New York as an adroit adoption of the tactics of the William J. Dickinson element in aligning the democratic national convention against Chief Croker and the New York support of David B. Hill.

At that time Tammany's orator Burke Cockran, held the convention throughout the night, until at daybreak various elements outside of New York, forced the nomination of Cleveland.

By 10:45 the galleries were packed to the limit, with waiting lines crowding at the entrances.

Proceeding the opening of the convention, several delegations held caucuses in their sections of the hall. The Clark vs. Bryan controversy was the utmost topic.

Called to Order. Chairman James called the convention to order at 11:03.

The twenty-seventh ballot began at 11:17. Stator Lee, of Tennessee, said, predicted Wilson would pass the five hundred mark soon and be nominated before night.

Bryan was enthusiastically cheered as he strode down the aisle to his seat.

No Band. There was no band in the armory, its contract having expired.

Rev. Carroll Galt, a Methodist clergyman, offered prayer a few minutes after the chairman called the convention to order.

When John B. Stanchfield's name was called, he took the platform and explained his vote.

Stanchfield bitterly attacked Bryan as one of the plutocrats whose name should be linked with Morgan, Belmont and Bryan.

"COMING EV ENTS CAST THEIR SHADOWS BEFORE!"

The most representative delegation that ever came to a national convention from New York.

He watched Stanchfield closely and occasionally smiled. Stanchfield closed, announcing his vote for Wilson.

The twenty-seventh ballot gave Clark a gain of five and one half; Wilson a loss of one; Underwood a loss of one half, compared with the twenty-sixth ballot.

By the twenty-eighth ballot was ordered at twelve twenty-two. The first notable break was Indiana, twenty-nine for Wilson, Kern one. There was great cheering.

Illinois Stands by Clark. Illinois on the twenty-seventh ballot cast fifty-eight votes for Clark.

The twenty-eighth ballot resulted in a close choice. Wilson gained one-half vote from Underwood in North Carolina.
