Considering Matter of Quarters in New Administration Building

COMMISSION HERE TODAY

Col. Ashley Horne of Clayton, chairman of the state building commission, arrived in the city today to attend a meeting this afternoon of the commission. One of the matters that was scheduled to be disposed of was the giving of the adjutant general quarters in the new building. The present quarters are entirely inadequate for the volume of business and General Leinster has little more than elbow room. Chairman Horne said that it was likely the adjutant general would be accommodated. Several other minor details are to be considered.

Before the meeting Colonel Horne was kept busy shaking hands with friends. He has recovered nicely from his recent illness, and although not strong yet, is steadily improving. He has taken a great interest in the new state building and expressed satisfaction made on it by the contractors.

"It's a poor choice," they told Mack. "The western members won't have time to get home and come back to New York." Mack insisted that New York was the better place. Daniels laid the case before Wilson. The governor agreed with Daniels that it wouldn't be right to have one-third of the committee members represented by proxy in New York. "It won't do," said Wilson. The governor sent for Mack and brought about the change in the date.
