The Chime Bells.

How it bursts upon the ear With its low reverberations. Sounding distant far, then near.

How the night wind, rising, falling, Bears along within its breast The sounds, resounding, dying, Till one's heart is full of rest !

What strange thoughts the bells awaken As they sound upon the air ! How the wind clings to their echoes And forgets all present care !

Have the chime-bells, as they roll In floods of melody deep-sounding, Round about the weary soul!

What a mournful, weird expression

To the saddened heart, how soothing Are the softened sounds they pour Upon the night air, like the murmur Of the wavelets on the shore!

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

FRICASSEED DUCK .- Most people think a duck must be roasted, but try this once instead: Cut a mallard or red duck into four quarters; chop an onion fine, and put all into a pot; cover with water, and add more as it boils away. Stir a little celery seed, or celery chopped up fine, three or four strips of saft pork, and when nearly done add a tablespoonful of Worcester sauce. Build a mound of mashed potatoes around your dish and carefully lay the contents of the fricassee in the center. Season with salt and pepper. This makes a juicy and delicious dish.

TRIPE A LA LYONAISE WITH TOMATOES--This economical dish, which is in reach of every family, is also very fin Take two pounds of dressed and boiled tripe, cut into small strips two inches long and put into saucepan. Parboil and drain off the first water; chop a small onion fine and let all stew twenty minutes; add half a tea-cup of thickening and then stir in half a can of tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper. This dish has become very popular in all the hotels throughout the country.

HINTS ABOUT OMELETS .- A great mistake made in the kitchen by servants who are left to do the cooking, is too much haste. Now in making an omelet if you wish it light and delicious, beat the white of two eggs and yelks separate, and then together; salt and pepper; add a little cream or pure milk the baker's house, where swung the blue with a small lump of butter or lard in a hot pan : pour it in : with your knife raise and roll by canting your frying pan, and by turning it over you place the omelet on the dish for the table

Horses that Stumble. In the matter of stumbling, Captain Haves (in his new book "Riding on the Flat and Across the Country") goes into its theory, drawing distinctions that may be very serviceable. He explains when stumbling arises from the knee intended for show rather than use. We may add, for ourselves, that we have ridden excellent horses with this failno doubt.

It happens comparatively seldom in exhilarating weather or when the horse has been brought fresh out of the stable; but when listless and languid, or when fatigue begins to tell, then you are the generally-cropped appearance of all quickly made aware of his condition by the gardens in the village. - The Argosy. his blundering. He backs up his own opinions and experiences on these subjects by communications from welljockey be a fairly good one, the riding should be left to his discretion. It is impossible to foresee all possible circumstances, and decisions must be taken on the spur of the moment. As for starting, he calls attention to the necessity for "getting off" as quickly as possible -a matter in which, though it is obviously of paramount importance, some people would appear to be strangely indifferent. As he says, "whatever distance is lost at the start must be made which time the effort to regain the lost to throwing away an advantage of as many pounds .- Saturday Review.

Every farmer should keep a blank book, in which to paste any agricultural scraps of value he may meet with in reading a paper. He will perhaps see suggestions the value of which he may desire to test, or hints he may wish to be governed by in his various operations on the farm; and yet, after reading the paper, he is apt to throw it down never to see it again. In such a case all the valuable articles will be lost. To prevent this he should clip from the papers such articles as he wishes to preserve and paste them in a scrap-book, to be referred to as occasion may require. Such a book at the end of a year or two will be found to be both interesting and

Then in with your potatoes, piling up cone-shape, as near as possible, after which cover the pile with some six inches of long straw, putting it on evenly all over and covering the same, with the exception of the top, with about six or eight inches of earth, which cover with boards, leaving it so until the approach of cold weather, when cover the top as you did the rest, only adding some two or three inches more of earth over the whole, and your work is done.

Keeping Files from Horses.

Before harnessing your horses in the morning apply a mixture of one part crude carbolic acid with six or seven parts olive oil, rubbing it lightly all over the animal with a rag, applying it a little more copiously on the ears and other parts more likely to be attacked. This application may need to be repeated in the middle of the day, although a single application will often prove effectual, no flies being willing to settle as long as any odor of the acid remains, and the horse is thus completely freed from all annovance.

The fire-fly, when examined individually, is by no means a prettylooking insect, and comparing it to other insects and flies it is certainly total length and weighs 25 grains, but the subject of my notice has a total length of nine-sixteenths of an inch and weighs .66 of a grain; we thus at once learn something as to his size and weight. The glow-fly or beetle as I should term it—has a black head and antennæ; the thorax and abdomen are of a vellow-red color. This latter part of the insect's body is divided into six rings, and, counting from the thorax, it is the fourth ring that emits the light. There is a rectangular opening in this ring which is merely covered by a very thin skin; it is in fact a window from which the light emerges. The insect has only one pair of wings; these are small, most delicate and thin, and are sheathed. It is worthy of careful notice that these insects fly both rapidly and slowly, but make no noise or buzz in the air. To test this further I have fre quently liberated several of these glow- her children, and her husbands." beetles in my bedroom, and in the dark they have only appeared as fairy stars, as no humming could be detected.
