SIGHTS AT SING SING.

The Prisoner's Paradise The Old Jail
The "Life Men" The Daily Routine The Puddle and Dark Cells Chapel and Hospital,

A correspondent of a New York paper has been visiting the Sing Sing prison, about which he says: Turning from the verdure-clad hills and the park-like scres which enclose Sing Sing to the immense buildings which lie at its foot and within high walls, there is the place of confinement for state criminals, where they are dreadfully punished, and yet so well treated that this prison is familiarly called the prisoner's paradise. Erected in 1825 and many times enlarged and improved, it has held the most notorious convicts of this state. Its stone corridors are well worn, the rutted flags telling of the tramp of the army of beings who have by their misdoings banished themselves from the society of their fellow-creatures. The long row of cells look gloomy and dingy and unrelenting, and one unaccustomed to this place cannot but see the ghost of pisery within the bars of each door, and speculate upon the degradation, remorse, the hope and despair of the wretches who have occupied them. The mess room, with its seats for 1,200, is also suggestive of the keen punishment of this prison, for although there is full and plenty to cat, and such as is served is excellent, yet to be compelled to herd with such a company and cut off tin, sitting on a stool, is not luxurious, to say the least, After a tour of the old fail one is seemly impressed with the fact that it is a place of punishment. A term in sing Sing prison means hard labor, which a man must learn to do, do well, and this while suffering every deprivation that makes life agreeable. This is the intention, most faithfully carried out. There are 1,500 convicts in the prison, 200 of whom are colored. Besides the officials and guards there are 300 men each day on the grounds teaching the convicts the trades. Nine hundred are employed in the foundries, where stoves and ranges are made under con tract, and the remainder are distributed in the laundry and shoe shops. The convicts all look hearty and well. Those who arrive at the jail ill generally come to good health after growing accustomed to the regular way of living early hours, plain food and wholeome labor. Once used to the latter, they dislike a holislay, for that means being shut in their cells. Sundays, when they get but two meals, and are confined from 10:30 o'clock a. THE TURCOMAN.

Some Notes from a Captive Correspondent

Returning from my visit to the ruined cities of the plain, I had a good opportunity of seeing how Turcomans amused themselves when abroad. The ground over which we were riding, owing to deep trenches, slippery mud and occasional deep flooding, required all the horseman's vigilance to keep himself and his beasts from coming to grief; but it was only over such spaces, disagreeable as they were, that I had any peace or quietness. The moment any thing like firm ground was reached some one of the party suddenly uttered a wild whoop and put his horse to the top of its speed. All the others were, it seems, bound in honor to follow suit, myself among the number, and then a scene of wild, headlong racing commenced, varied by different performances. Each person was bound to unsling his rifle, and going at full speed to take deliberate aim at some object and fire. Then, resting on his piece, he would draw his sword, and racing up to the person next him, exchange passes and donrishes.

This was all very well on unbroken with a club, but the frog is utterly or round, but the sudden occurrence of a posed to any such proceeding.
