FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD. Beatthy Homes for Antmals.

Horses, sheep, dogs and the higher animals in general bave vital systems exactly like those of man, and seemingly as sensitive too. A dose of any particular poison is just as fatal to a large dog as to a man of similar weight, and poisons that are breathed in by the lungs of a horse find their way just as quickly to the broad as they would if inhaled by man, woman or child, while had food is just as mischievous in its effects upon the health of animals as of bunnans, The inmates of stables and sheds need light and ventilation fully as much as the denizers of our handsomest houses. And yet thousands of herses, upon whose work men and families depend for their livelihood, are stabled in close, dark, filthy inclosures, while cows, of whose lives thousands of children are partakers in the most literal sense, fare far worse in all that pertains to health. It is be-

Out of door pigs would not show so well at the fairs, and would probably be passed over by judges and people who have been taught to admire only the fat and helpless things which get the prizes. Such pigs are well adapted to fill lard kegs, whereas the standard of perfection should be a pig which will make the most ham with the least waste of fat, the longest and deepest sides, with the most lean meat; it should have ben- enough to allow it to stand up and help itself to food, and carry with it the evidence of health and natural development in all its parts. Pigs which run in a range or pasture have good appetites—the fresh air and exercise give them this-hence they will eat a great variety of food and much coarser than when confined in pen a Nothing need go to waste on the farm for lack of a market. They will consume all the refuse fruit, roots, pumpkins, and all kinds of vegetables, which will make them grow. By extending the root patch, and planting the fodder corn thinner, so that nubbins will form on it, and by putting in a sweet variety, the number of pigs may be increased in proportion.
