

The Chatham Record

THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1883.

H. A. LONDON, Editor.

The ELEVENTH annual convention of the North Carolina Press Association was held last week in the town of Waynesville, Haywood county, and will long be remembered, with the liveliest emotions of pleasure by all who were so fortunate as to attend it. Before proceeding with a description of the pleasures enjoyed while attending the convention we will give a statement of its business.

The convention was called to order on the morning of the 4th inst by Mr. G. S. Bradshaw, president of the last convention, and upon the roll being called it was announced that about seventy members were present. An address of welcome was delivered by the mayor of the town, Mr. W. B. Ferguson, which was responded to by the president. The annual election of officers was then held, resulting as follows: H. A. London, president; J. A. Robinson, Palenom John, and Josephus Daniels, vice presidents; Jordan Stone, secretary and treasurer; S. A. Ashe, H. A. Foote, E. C. Hackney, E. A. Oldham and J. H. Ennis, executive committee; and Elder Gold, chaplain. Mr. G. S. Bradshaw was elected the reader, and Mr. Theo. H. Hill the poet, of the next convention.

At noon of the 4th the convention and citizens of the town and surrounding country were addressed by Hon. Montfort McGhee, State commissioner of agriculture, who fully sustained his reputation as an eloquent and cultured orator. At night the annual poem, written for the occasion by Miss Rebecca Cameron, was read by Col. C. R. Jones, and the annual oration was delivered by Mr. H. A. London. On the next day several essays were read. Col. J. D. Cameron read an essay entitled "Antiquities of Western North Carolina," which was written in his usual pleasant style and was as interesting as it was instructive, proving that a prehistoric race inhabited that portion of our State. The essay of Mr. T. A. Oldham was a full and carefully prepared statement of "The Material Prosperity of North Carolina," which we wish could be read by all our subscribers. It was estimated to run in six columns and long to be reprinted.

The convention was received most kindly and entertained most cordially by the citizens of Waynesville and the proprietors of the White Sulphur Springs. On Saturday evening a quiet was given by the editors of the town and another by the proprietors of the Springs, both of which were well received and much enjoyed. A trial was also enjoyed by the members of the convention the shop of a large quantity of dried meat from Tolay vineyard, Hon. W. J. Green. On the last night of our visit a most enjoyable entertainment was given at the Springs, consisting of vocal and instrumental music and recitations by the children of the country. Mr. F. W. Langhorne, Judge and the charming Miss Welch.

On Friday we reluctantly bade farewell to our made friends and the scenes of so much pleasure and joy we had towards Asheville. When the train had arrived near that town we were met by a long line of carriages containing members of the Board of Trade of Asheville and a goodly number of our brethren of the South Carolina Press Association. Among them we visited Richmond Hill and were most pleasantly and hospitably received by its talented owner, Richard Pearson, esq., a son of the late chief justice. We found this to be a beautifully built park, with winding roadways to the very summit from which a most magnificent view was had of the surrounding country. At the foot of the hill is Mr. Pearson's cottage and in front of this was a beautiful orange grove, in the basin of which were placednumerable bottles of ice champagne, &c., &c., which at their invitation our host were opened most propitiously. We doubt if the rapid popping of corks in a large jar of ice-cold buttermilk was ever heard more loudly than over the party and was well patronized. After before of the men who lead and mould public opinion in our good old State.

Other matters were discussed and disposed of that were of interest to the editorial fraternity but not to the public, and we will not weary our readers therewith, but will proceed to speak of the

MAGNIFICENT country

and beautiful scenery through which we travelled and which we saw. We might write column after column in praise of that favored spot of God's creation and then give our readers but a faint idea of the fertility and beauty of Western North Carolina. It is indeed a wonderful country, and fortunate are the people who inhabit its lofty mountains and lovely valleys. The Press Convention was the first North Carolina State convention of any kind that had ever assembled west of the Blue Ridge, but we feel assured that it will by no means be the last. The town of Waynesville, where we convened, is 32 miles south-west of Asheville, and is the county seat of Haywood county. It is a very elevated town, being at an altitude of 2,750 feet above the level of the sea, and yet it's in a valley, for there are ranges of mountains surrounding the town, many peaks of which are about 6,000 feet in height. The Lickstone Mountain affords a most extended and sublime view, and is more easily ascended than any other, as one can ride mule-back to its summit. There is probably not a town east of the Rocky Mountains that is so beautifully situated as Waynesville, and, when the railroad over 12 miles distance is extended there, we cannot doubt that this town will become the most popular mountain resort in the Southern States. One of the handsomest and most commodious courthouses in the State is now being erected there. It is built of brick and will be not only an ornament to Waynesville but an honor to Haywood county and a monument to the public spirit of her citizens. About one mile distant from Waynesville are

THE WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, which are at a higher altitude than any other sulphur springs in the United States. This is the most picturesque and lovely spot that we have ever seen, and one for which Nature has done more than for any other resort probably in America. The spring is strongly impregnated with sulphur and its waters possess most valuable medicinal qualities. It is situated in a valley and yet at an altitude of 2,716 feet above the level of the sea through the centre of the town manager, Mr. H. A. Gudger, of which dashes Richland creek—a most rapid and lovely mountain stream—and rising abruptly nearby are lofty mountains presenting a stuporous and delightful resort, and seem not surpassed anywhere. The grounds are tastefully laid out with pleasant walks, rustic bridges and seats here and there, wide-spreading trees affording a most cool and refreshing shade, while the soft and luxuriant grass tempts one to roll on its verdant bed, and yield himself to the full enjoyment of Nature's self. This spot is a real scene of beauty that would tempt any one to leave the busy bustle of the outer world, and retire to its fascinating scenes. The sun will understand why it has become so popular. The hotel is the largest in the State, having a frontage of nearly 600 feet, and is surrounded by paths aggregating 3,000 feet in length. It is provided with all the modern conveniences of the best hotels, with electric lights in every room, the combined length of whose wires amount to 21 miles, etc., that would tempt any one to leave the busy bustle of the outer world, and retire to its fascinating scenes. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do not know, as we may imagine, but the latter, as the steamship, which dashes by with the roar of its waters, adds much to the picturesqueness of the lovely scene. The rugged mountains rise abruptly on the other side of the river, and the rocky valley that nestles at their foot, and seem to invite the pleasure seeker and invalid to stay. Here too the former we do