Biting Horses.

A foreign journal avers that horse are successfully cured of this vice by putting a piece of hard wood, an inch and a half square, in the animal's mouth, about the same length as an ordinary snaffle bit. It may be fast ened by a thong of leather passed through two licles in the ends of the wood, and secured to the bridle. It must be used in addition to the bit, but in no way to impede the working of the bit. Rarey adopted the plan with the zebra in the Zoo, which was a terrible brute at biting. Mr Rarey suc ceeded, however, in taming and train ing him to harness, and drove him through the streets of London. Ani mals with this vice should be treated kindly in the stable and not abused with pitchfolk handles, whips, ere An apple, crust of bread a piece of beef, etc. and a kind pat, but firm, watchful hand and eye, with the use of the above wooden bit, will care the most inveterate biter. Little Hum

Jum was a dear little hummingbird. Grandma found him one cold, Wet morning under the grape-vine by the back porch. She brought him into the warm sitting-room and gave him some hot milk to drink.

Soon he opened his little bright eyes and looked around but he did not stir. He lay in grandma's hand as if deals and soon she put him in the baywindow among the flowers.

Then he same to life pretty quick, I can tell you. May put some sweetened water in a saucer under the big geranium, and he soon began to sin it just as he got the honey out of the bright flower darting his little tongue in and out so quickly we could hardly see it.

He soon barned that we were his friends, and was a happy as could be, flitting about among grandma's flowers in the sunny window. All through the cold winter he lived there, and amosed as with his quaint little ways, but when spring came he grew measy, and one day, when a beautiful little green-and cold humminer bled was distince about in the garden, we let turn go free and they went away together.

He liked the tree life the best, for we never saw him again, although we watched among the flowers in the garden all through the long summer days.
