FOR THE FARM AND HOME. Pastures.

Prof. E. W. Stewart writes: "A variety of food is as important in pasturing as in stall feeding, and those pastures having the greatest variety of grasses are the best. Some old pastures contain a large number of varieties each having its peculiar qualities of nutriment, aroma and davor. Such old pastures produce the finest flavored beef, mutton and milk. Too little care is taken in seeding for pasture to select a sufficient variety. The greater the variety the better for the thrift of the cattle. In addition to the standard timothy and clover, other varieties are valuable, such as blue grass or June grass, flat-stalked blue grass or wire grass, rough-stalked meadow grass meadow fescue, sheep fescue, ordered grass, red top and sweet-scented ver-

Watering Window Plants

The question is frequently asked how often and how much should window plants be watered, and searcely any one, not even a fi-rist, can tell you just what you want to know Some plants require more water than others, and in rooms that are kept very warm more water is naturally required.
