A Modest Man's Adventure. If there is one thing in this world that

I hate more than another it is an evening party, whether it take the form of tea, music, and twaddle, or come in the more awk ward guise of a regular dance. Unfortunately, I am short and ill-tavored. Indeed, I can well remember even now the rage and grief which possessed my youthful mind when I discovered that I was called "The Tend" by my school companions, and how that our old exactionan, who was my ally and confident in those days, could find no better words of consolation than "Never | which his words opened out to me, you named, Master Jack, you let 'em talk, a pack of young impertinences. What I say is 'andsome is as 'andsome does."

Time has but accentuated my many conscious, and the result is that I am shy, gauche and nervous in society.

One fell and dreadful day cmark it. O Time, with the blackest letter in thy esquire them to a dancing party at South Kennington. I made feeble excuses; they were exercised. I appealed to my respected mether; also! she thinks I only need bringing out to become an enter-

Well, I gave in. What would you have me to do? Ugly as I am, I can't help seeing that Kate is a most pleasing person. I find it difficult to say "No" to my one, and an impossibility in the case of this lovely cousin of mine.

Kate and Millicent are what are called "time girls," and I am not sure that I did not eatch the ghost of a grin upon the long list of flunky faces in the hall as I stumbled along in my right boots, with Kate on my right arm and Millicent on my left, and both of them talking to one another over my head, alas!

The bullroom was a long oblong, and opposite to the end where the musicians were stationed there was a kind of alcove or buy window, in which was placed one of those large circular ottomans which have a cushioned seat all round, and on top of the lounge a remything be more caticine to a man of my retiring disposition? If I could only get behind that happy oftoman, behold me blis-fully conscaled until the general move to supper should drag me from my resting place. Fortune favored ning to realize the pleasantness of my secusion and the telef from the shyness which assails me in public I felt a most depressing sleepiness creeping over attire had become changed into the clawhammer cost and other male habiliments of evening society. However, as I crept round the ottoman, and peering out from my corner, saw a wale stretch of white flauretoth, dimly nelited, before me and marked the music stands at the other end of the room, the dreadful truth burs in upon me; they had all gone down to supper. Now in my purturba- tion at the prospect of going to the about inable dancing party I had been unable to attack my dinner with my usua robust appetite. I was therefore, rayon only hungry. Moved by a desire to cat and drink at whatever cost to my con stitutional modesty, and agonized at the fear lest the supper should be over and the debris thereof cleared away before 1 could obtain what I began to want with an increasing craving, it struck me that it would be quite possible for me to glide into the supper-room among the servants, who would be constantly going in and coming out. I slipped quietly down the stairs, and soon found myself close to them. Now was my opp rtunity, and I was just going to seize it, when a fiend in human shope, a waiter in evening dr. ss, pushed of Lower Egypt. hands, saying in that unpronounceable cockney twang, "now then Swaney, (my mother calls my hair auburn) look alive Take those yere strawberries round; and mind you don't spill 'em." Not a single minute's time was given me for expostulation or explanation; other waiters were pushing on behind; and before I could gather my scattered wits I found myself in the brilliantly. I had not a mement to decide. The back to 1660, horror of being seen in such a too-ridicculous position terrified me, and I found myself handling round the fruit, with a myself handing round the fruit, with a Yelk of one egg, one teaspoonfed of waiter following me with cream and salt, one teaspoonful of ginger, three sugar. Imagine the awful state of my trops of turpentine. Beat the ingredimind when I approached my consins! They were close together, separated only by the partner of one of them. I could see, as I drew near, that they were talking vivaciously. It was their turn next. The gentleman beside Kate said, "No, thanks," Bless him! Kate refused him without looking up. Millicent allowed her friend to place some strawberries on her plate, talking eagerly all the time; and with a sigh of relief I passed on my strange round unrecognized. No questions were asked, and not knowing what to do, I followed them, cr, rather, went with them, to the kitchen part of the mansion, leaving one or two in the supper room to attend on the gentlemen who
