FARM AND GARDEN.

A Veritable Manure Mine.

If you have no basement under the barn and have not dug out under the stable floor for a long time, just take up the floor and dig out that part of the manure which has been accumulating there in the soil for so many years. Spread it over a number of acres of plowed land for a crop, remembering not to put on too much to the acre and to thoroughly cultivate it in. Take from three to four feet deep, under where the urine would soak, of the soil and hard pan or whatever it may be. There are millions of dollars' worth of this fertilizing property lying dormant which ought to be used. You will receive benefit for years to come by acting on this suggestion.—Farm and Home.

Keep the Mangers Clean.

The more highly fed and spirited the horse the more dainty he will be about his feed, and the greater care must be taken to keep feed boxes and mangers free from filth. Almost as soon would, however, refuse to eat out of mangers as they often are fed, with portions of the uneonsumed hay or grain to be rained over and soured by rats while the horse is away at work. This is a too common condition of many farmers' stables at this season, when hot, sultry weather dulls the appetite and makes solid food doubly offensive by its smell. Many a hard-worked horse goes off his feed and is sold, and grows poor from the cause alone. Most persons do not realize the reason to find out just what will be eaten or left, and in grain. If any remains after the horse is taken out in the morning, be sure it is removed from the manger, and if any other waste from the stable.—Ex.
