Buman Ministry. To all who walk the mays of earth, Of noble or of humble birth, Belongs a power offpriceless worth, Divinely given, Beloved of heaven.

A power, beautiful indeed, help their fellows in their need, The bunger of their souls to fee t, And make less dreary. Lives sail and weary :

By little things that cost not much + A kind y word, a look, a fough-Thus surny gleans to bring to such As lack lites societiess. In its completeness.

Yet o'er earth's pathoreus high and low, No merrals is ragey fainting go, For what their fellows might bestow cir hearts to lighte Their days to brighten,

Not pitile so are all, nor cold. Yet all neithbokingly withhold.

Much they might give more dear than gold, To sperits weary, With burdens dream,

Name this fellow's heart may read, the know the measure of his need, Or number to see who inly plech, Yet smiling cover Their heart woulds over:

And make there are a rail that live That live not better, to not be The recessor things that all may give Of helpful power. In every hour.

The kin by word and look and smile, How mighty are they to beguite

Through rever tearless. All at the many that remain In somethings a sud to pain, And wall and long and pine in vafn

O mortals, freely give of such-The cheering word, the smile, the touch-That techniquest, that he're comuch Sad hearts to he histor.
