

THURSDAY, - AUGUST 10, 1869.

Local Records.

- 1,000 Cedar Posts, two square 5 inches, wanted by J. S. Moore, Jr.

- A first-class sewing machine for sale. Call for my approval before buying.

- The next session of the Pittsboro Academy will be on the 21st of this month.

- O. S. Poole & Son are selling dress goods, ladies' hats and bonnets underwritten at half price.

- The best two-horse plow is the Smith Beadie sold and chartered by Bumham's Chartered Plow Co.

- The Commissary and field and camp supplies are ready. O. S. Poole & Son are agents for them.

- You can find a splendid line of saddles, braces, etc., collars and collar pads at O. S. Poole & Son's.

- Received this week, 100 O. S. Poole & Sons' one cent sets. Also a big lot of dresses, hats, etc., THE FACTORY.

- If you need your goods, see the line at O. S. Poole & Sons. They have the most judicious merchants in the country.

- If you want to buy a suit of clothes, better go and see O. S. Poole & Sons and want SAMARITAN.

- Great bargains at our checks, calicoes, drapery and dry goods at O. S. Poole & Sons before it is too late.

- Dr. H. P. Moore, in quizzing the officers and citizens of Pittsboro, told us that we were not to be blamed for the low feed in the community. See TALK.

- There are still a few specimens left of the Pittsboro Headgear which you can buy cheap. The price - says Dr. Moore has been cut to 10 cents per pair.

- Another reason a great many pointed arms pass unnoticed in the martial scenes is that they are the property of individuals here, having F. A. Thompson, M. Farrell and others.

- Beyond a doubt, if you are in Pittsboro, you will find the mail and mail box at the post office, all summer long, open from 8 to 10 o'clock, giving you a good chance to mail and stamp letters and packages.

- Dr. J. H. Moore, manager of the Pittsboro mail and express office, on Wednesday evening, August 1st, was on his way to Bynum on the Jameson road, early today following, and a telegram came from the post office in Pittsboro, saying that there was no mail for him.

- They have just a single Popular store at W. L. London & Son's large lot of fine traps, satchels and valises, all well packed, excepting in the exterior, consisting of various, but only 10. Besides, single and double-trunk, all prices. Books, hats, cloaks, a few instances of hats being at half price.

- It is hard profit by me. They will sell for the next two days, as long as they last, at the Popular Store at W. L. London & Son's, a large lot of fine traps, satchels and valises, all well packed, excepting in the exterior, consisting of various, but only 10. Besides, single and double-trunk, all prices. Books, hats, cloaks, a few instances of hats being at half price.

- We regret to hear of the death of our old friend, Mr. Thomas C. Dixon, who died on last Friday, aged 74 years. He had resided in that part of Atlanta township taken from Chatham and annexed to Alamance. He was a modest, excellent man in every relation of life and his death is a great loss, not only to his family, but to the section in which he resided.

- We are pleased to hear that in many of the public school districts of this county the rival or contesting committees have adopted the Fusion suggestion and are acting together, so that the schools may not suffer further usefulness be it all impaired by the unseemly refusal of the Fusion board to obey the law. In Gulf township the trustees appointed by the Fusion board very properly declined to qualify.

- A short but by no means uninteresting game of baseball was played here on last Thursday afternoon between the Pittsboro and Bynum teams, resulting in a victory for the Pittsboro team by the score of 7 to 3. Both of these rival teams have now won a game from each other, the Bynum team having been the victor in a previous game in which the score was 10 to 5, so that the result of the third and deciding game, soon to be played, will be awaited with much interest by the friends of the respective teams.

SOLDIERS' RE-UNION!

A Great Success—Large Attendance—Sumpituous Dinner—Old War Songs—Interesting Relics, &c.

The annual reunion of the ex-Confederate soldiers of Chatham County was held at this place on last Friday and in every respect was a grand success, and a number of old soldiers who were the survivors of the war, and all seemed to enjoy themselves very much. The oldest veteran present was Mr. James L. Fields, who although eighty-seven years old, is well preserved and we hope may be spared many more years. These annual reunions are not intended to revive the animosities engendered by the war, nor do they. This was illustrated in this reunion by the presence, as an invited guest at the dinner of a Union soldier who had fought bravely against these old Confederates. They are simply occasions when men, who had fought together, marched together and bled together for four years, may enjoy together pleasant and exchange friendly greetings before they all "pass over the river" and join their departed comrades.

AN EXTRAVAGANT DEATH.

That "Death loves a shining mark" was most sadly illustrated when on last Saturday the pure young son of Kate Turner braved the fight to it's Heavenly home. When the old die we think in the ripened grain gathered for the harvest, but it seems so suddenly and so mysteriously when one is in down so young, so lovely, so full of life's hopes and joys. Just entering on beautiful womanhood—she would have been eighteen years old next month—and with the hope of a long life of happiness and usefulness she is snatched away by Death's resistless hand. Oh how easily mysterious and terrible are God's ways.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.

The deceased was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Clark, of this place, and was a young lady of unusual beauty both in character and lineage, a favorite with all who knew her. Just one year before her death she had given birth to a son, and her husband, Mr. Clark, a widower, had recently married again.</p