

It now seems probable that ex-President Cleveland may be the Democratic candidate for President next year. It is generally conceded that he can get more votes at the North than any other Democrat. To a greater extent than any other Democrat he has the confidence of the conservative men of the North, and especially of the business men, of both political parties.

If he desires the nomination there is little doubt about his being able to get it, but it is not probable that he desires it, and he may not allow his name to be presented to the nominating convention. There is nothing for him to gain by accepting the nomination and being elected, for he has already been the Democratic nominee three times and been President twice. With his highly honorable record he can well afford to enjoy a dignified retirement from active politics and the cares of office.

But it is said that, even if Mr. Cleveland can carry more Northern States than any other Democrat he cannot carry the "Old South." This we think is an insult to the South in general. If he is nominated he will carry every Southern State, for how could any Southern Democrat be so in preferring him to Roosevelt? While it is true that there has been widespread and very unjust prejudice aroused against him in several Southern States, yet we are pleased to know that this prejudice has greatly abated, and already there is a general recognition of public sentiment in his favor. Even among those who now speak favorably of him for they follow the tide; are some of those who held office under him and then so foully abused him.

The litigation by the railroads at Durham over Peabody street is at last ended by a compromise. This litigation began in 1888, and has been pending in several courts. It was begun in Durham, was transferred to Chatham where it was twice tried, was argued three times in the Supreme court, and finally was ended in the Federal court.

This litigation has delayed several years the construction of a much needed union depot at Durham, which at last will now be speedily erected.

Something remarkable about this litigation, and which illustrates the uncertainty of a jury verdict, is the fact that at the first trial here in 1890, the defendant introduced no evidence and yet gained the case, but at the second trial the defendant introduced evidence and lost the case.

COL. W. T. Blackwell died at Durham on last Thursday night, aged 64 years, and in his death was closed a noble career, decorated with sunshine and glory, with prosperity and adversity.

He was a poor boy, who started life under unfavorable environments and, after accumulating a fortune, lost it all and the fortune penniless. With the exception of Gen. J. S. Carr he did more than any other man to build up the town of Durham, and his noble spirit and liberality were manifested. And yet when luxury overtook him many of those who benefited in the sunshine of his prosperity turned their backs on him.

Durham honored itself in giving Col. Blackwell one of the most imposing funerals ever known in that town.

The new Republic of Panama has been officially recognized by President Roosevelt, and a treaty will soon be recognized by all the European Powers. In so doing they recognize the right of secession, for which the South fought for four years.

This revolution was so sudden and successful, and the results accomplished, as to lead the nations

The county superintendent of public schools held a notable meeting at Raleigh last week. Nearly every county superintendent in the State was present, and all were greatly encouraged in the good work in which they are engaged by this meeting.

The uncertainty of life was most fully illustrated in a fatal accident which took place in New York City last night. A highly respected citizen of that city, a highly successful business man, was taken down from the top of his skyscraper, and was found in a helpless condition.
