from Miss Aspinwall and was to the effect that she had written to her friend Mr. Morris for a precise description of the gratheman he lead been kind changle to introduce to her notice. This was satisfactory, and precent the artist from semiling a letter to Mr. Byrd, as he had contemplated. For though he had no doubt in his own baind as to the identity of this stranger is had a product to put himself in a false light in contention with one who owned so saccestle a targue and held at the moment the former couple appeared to be in the advance, and then at the moment the former couple appeared to be in the advance, and then at the world be in damage of losing the prize he had evidently set his heart tipon gaining.
