The Republican county convention has been called to meet here on Saturday, March 21st, for the purpose of electing delegates to the Republican State convention to be held in Greensboro on April 30th.

County Superintendent R. P. Johnson is this week visiting the public schools in Baldwin, Riggsbee, Williams and New Hope townships. Last week and week before last he visited 36 schools in the western part of the county.

The colored brass band of this town paraded the streets yesterday afternoon, every member arrayed in a grotesque costume, and attracted much attention. Although recently organized this band plays very creditably.

On last Monday chief of police Whitaker, of Chapel Hill, brought here and placed in jail a negro named Luke Mason against whom a true bill was found at the last term of court in this county for assault with a deadly weapon.

At the meeting of the road commissioners held here on last Monday, they passed an order that the road supervisors should not pay over eight cents an hour for road hands. The road supervisors will therefore govern themselves accordingly.

There is an old saying "When March comes in like a lamb it goes out like a lion." If there be any truth in this, then we may expect non-like weather at the close of this month, because last Sunday (the first day of March) was as pleasant a spring day as any body would wish for.

There have been a few cases of smallpox in Hickory Mountain township, nearly all of which cases have almost recovered. These cases were in the families of Messrs. J. E. Moore and Will Pickard, and the smallpox is supposed to have been caught by Mr. Moore while on a trip to Orange county.

In order to raise some money to buy uniforms the colored brass band at this place gave a minstrel show last night at the court-house, which was attended by about as many white people as colored people and all seemed to enjoy the occasion. There were some very amusing and humorous scenes and local "hits" that provoked much laughter.

By the act of the last Legislature establishing the stock law in this county the county commissioners were authorized to sell all the stock law fences heretofore built in Chatham, and at their meeting on the first Monday in January they appointed Mr. Spence Taylor as their agent to sell these fences. He has finished selling them and the proceeds of the sale amounted to over $700, besides reserving a considerable quantity of the wire fencing for the county home. Our county will now be free from any fence tax, which has heretofore been levied every year, and will be quite a relief to many.

- First Grade—Harriet Perley. Second Grade—Katherine Eubanks, Susie Morgan. Fourth Grade—Radcliffe Lanus, Henrietta Morgan. Fifth Grade—Obie Harmon, Margaret Womble. Sixth Grade—Evelyn Alston, Margie Coble.

Prohibition Rally. There will be a prohibition rally at this place on Saturday, the 28th of this month, when the prohibition campaign in Chatham will be started most auspiciously. The Methodist district conference will be held here that week and the presiding elder, at the suggestion of the pastor of this circuit, has kindly consented to take a recess of the conference on the 28th long enough to have a grand prohibition rally.

This day (the 28th) is selected because it was thought to be the most opportune time that could be designated, as there will be quite a large crowd here attending the conference. It is proposed to make it a county meeting and to organize thoroughly for the campaign in Chatham. Several prominent speakers have been invited to present and address the meeting, and the state organizer of the Anti-Saloon League (Rev. R. L. Davis) has written that he will be sure to be here.

No much interest has thus far been aroused in this county over the approaching prohibition election because our people take it for granted as a matter of course that prohibition will be carried by a large majority, and therefore they do not seem much concerned over the result. And just therein (in this over-confidence) lies the greatest danger to the success of the prohibitionists.

List of Jurors. The county commissioners at their meeting yesterday drew the following jurors for the next term of Chatham superior court, which begins on the 14th of May:

- Albright—W. H. White. Baldwin—T. E. Williams. Bear Creek—W. E. Brewer, R. L. Welch. Cape Fear—J. H. Cotten, R. H. Fitchett, J. T. O'Connell.

Chatham Turkey Hunters. From the Statesville Landmark.

Major George W. Clegg, who is not only a turkey hunter from way back but a native of Chatham county, where, according to the veracious Chatham Record, they do their hunting and almost everything else that are just a little ahead of the balance of the state—but, as we were saying, Major Clegg read in the Landmark how a Chatham man boasted—or the Record did for him—that he had killed 15 wild turkeys the past season, getting three from one drove, or covey, as the bird hunters say.

Then Major Clegg refreshed his memory and dropped into the Landmark office. "In the winter of 1853-'54," says the major, "I was living in Chatham, my native county, and that winter I killed 40 wild turkeys. At one time I killed eight turkeys at one shot and at another time I killed four at one shot."

Now before the skeptics begin to jeer and ask for an affidavit, we want to say that no affidavit is necessary where Major Clegg is known. He was a county officer in Ireland for about 20 years, is a steward in the Methodist Church, of which he has been a member nearly all his life, and if the major had said he killed all 40 of the turkeys at one shot the Landmark would have accepted his statement without a word.

And Major London, of the Chatham Record, will take notice that Chatham turkey hunters of today, who boast of 15 turkeys a season—not even two at one shot—are as children compared with the hunters of Major Clegg's day in Chatham.

[Major Clegg is the oldest son of Mr. Nat. Clegg, deceased, who is pleasantly remembered by our older readers and was for many years the county surveyor. In justice to the Chatham hunters of the present day we would say that wild turkeys were much more numerous here when Major Clegg lived here (over fifty years ago) than they are now. We hope he will visit his old county next turkey season and try his luck again.—Ed. Record.]

Chapel Hill News: A small colored boy, son of Minnie Burnett, was fearfully burned late Monday evening by pouring kerosene oil on the fire. There were two or three other children around the fireplace when the accident occurred, but managed to escape without being burned. The boy's face, hands and body are burned so badly it is doubtful about his recovery.

Among other visitors attending the wedding were Mrs. Walter E. Sharp, sister of the bride, and Miss Jessie Sharp, of the Bar in to. A Friend.

Killed by Avalanche.

Berne, Switzerland, March 2.—A large searching party is trying to recover the bodies of eleven men, including a doctor and an engineer, who were killed by an avalanche which swept down the hostelry built to accommodate the workers on the tunnel for the Loetschberg Railway, connecting Berne with the Simplon tunnel. Two children rushed into the hotel shouting a warning that the avalanche was moving upon the building. Their warning was too late, however. The children were killed. Fifteen men were seriously hurt. Several other buildings were demolished by the rush of air caused by the displacement of the atmosphere.
