The revenue bill has been reported to the House by the Finance Committee and no doubt will be passed by the House and Senate with few, if any, amendments. This bill makes very few changes from the present revenue law, and indeed very few changes have been made in our revenue bills since 1901. The few changes made are not important, relating chiefly to special taxes, as, for instance, the tax on horse dealers is increased from $25 to $50 a year.
