Bonus Bill Doomed

The soldiers' bonus bill, passed by the House and sent to committee by the Senate, is expected to take a long rest before being brought up again. Some senators are frank in saying the bill will never come out of the committee.

Opposition to soldier relief has been more pronounced in the Senate than in the House, where it was passed by a vote 239 to 92. The provisions of the bill are considered particularly odious by a number of members of the Senate.

Green Flag Motor Oil

Motorists and all users of lubricating oil for any and all automotive purposes can now obtain this wonder oil in Pittsboro. It is a super-lubricant that has set an entirely new and higher standard in the production of a motor oil. Its brilliant performance in the recent racing derby in Atlanta, where it was used exclusively in the racing cars, removed every doubt of its claims to withstand heat. It is in effect a "motor insurance." Read the Green Flag advertisement on another page.

Large numbers of former American soldiers, finding conditions in America unsatisfactory, are returning to France to find employment, and finding work for them in that country is providing quite a serious problem for officials of the American legion in Paris.

A TRUE FRIEND AND A TRUE STORY

Tom Leach, the colored janitor of the courthouse here, went to Florida two or three weeks ago to visit a friend, and thereby hangs a tale.

Tom has returned and tells of his trip. He says Florida is a great country. While in Jacksonville he was the guest of an old friend of his whom he had not seen nor heard of since 1876. During that year Tom and his friend worked together in a hotel in Morehead City. Tom finally landed in Pittsboro where he married and settled down. His friend went to Florida. At that time land was cheap in Florida and Tom's friend bought many acres of it for 25 and 50 cents an acre. Later, a railroad was built through this land and a site for a depot was given the railroad. This man began to raise cattle for the market. As he prospered he bought land and built houses in Jacksonville and now has more than 20 houses which return him a good rental and today Tom's friend sits back on his oars a rich man.

He never forgot Tom and learning through a drummer that Tom was still living, wrote to him. Letters were passed between them, old times were gone over. Tom reminding his friend of the days and nights when they rattled dishes together in the hotel at Morehead City. That settled it. A few days after these letters passed Tom received a check covering all his expenses from Pittsboro to Jacksonville and return. And he went.

So much for true friendship.

Should End All Argument

In answer to inquiries as to where Gen. William T. Sherman made his famous speech in which he defined war, and to refute intimations that he never said it at all. A Columbus, O., dispatch asserts that Gen. Sherman said in Columbus on August 12, 1880, and in support of the assertion produces from its files the copy of a short address he made there at that time in which the now famous expression defining war was made.

The occasion was a reunion of the Civil war soldiers of Ohio. President Hayes was a guest of honor and most of living generals of the Civil war were present. The addresses were made in the open air at Franklin park. It was raining hard when Gen. Sherman's turn came to speak, but he stood out uncovered and delivered his short speech. As published, it contained just 308 words. Alluding to the fact that old soldiers did not mind the rain, he continued:

"You all know that this is not soldiering. There is many a boy here to day who thinks war is all glory, but boys, it is all hell. You can bear that warning to generations yet to come. I look upon it with horror, but, if it has to come, I am here."

This last clause brought great applause and when it subsided the general proceeded on another line of thought.

The death ratio among Civil war veterans has been one out of every ten since Memorial day last year, according to announcement made at the Bureau of Pensions in Washington. There were 273,720 veterans on the pension rolls on May 30, 1919. The deaths reported since are 27,720.

Chatham County Roads.

Editor of The Record:— I stand for anything which means for the uplift and development of our good county. The one thing which has done more to retard the progress and development of our county than anything else is our bad roads. I am proud of what some townships of the county are doing for good roads; but Chatham county as a whole is doing nothing like what she ought to do in this direction. She is not keeping pace with many of her neighboring counties. I feel that one of the reasons for our backwardness in road building is that we as a county, have no definite road building plan. I believe the county should be the unit for road building instead of the township. I realize that this was impossible at first and perhaps still impossible on account of hostile sentiment; but I believe that we should work in that direction. Township roads in order to be of much benefit must connect with the roads of the adjoining townships and must lead to the most frequented places, and often they are laid off with neither of these things in view. And, also, in order to stimulate the working of roads and the expenditure of money for good roads, and in order to conserve our money and our labor and make each mean the most, the roads must, as far as possible, be permanent roads and not roads whose course may soon be changed and the old road deserted for the new and the time and labor and money spent on the old road practically thrown away.

I think the courses of the roads over the entire county should be established, so that the people may know which roads to work and where to spend their money. It will take a competent surveyor to do this. I hope the county commissioners will employ a surveyor and have these roads laid off.

Successful Mission.

Rev. John Hartley, D. D., conducted a mission at the Episcopal Church from Monday, May 24th, to Sunday, May 31st. These services were most interesting. Dr. Hartley preaching some of the strongest sermons that has ever been heard in Pittsboro. On Sunday morning, May 30th, he preached on the statement of Christ to Nicodemus that we must be born again, which he explained in a very clear and intensely interesting manner. The concluding service on Sunday night, May 30th, was a sermon on "The Conquests of the Nation," which was greatly appreciated by his large congregation. All of his sermons were excellent, and in all of them Dr. Hartley showed that he is a thinker of rare discernment and an able preacher. Pittsboro people are unanimous in hoping that they may have the pleasure of hearing Dr. Hartley again.

47 investigations were authorized. The Senate and House have had 1,024 resolutions before them for consideration, and 420 of them were adopted.

HONOR TABLET OF PITTSBORO SCHOOL

I am giving below the list of students from Pittsboro high school who are entitled to be placed on the honor roll of the Pittsboro school. This is correct according to the best information I have been able to obtain. If any one has any correction please give it to me this week for I am planning to have the tablet made at once, and then it will be impossible to change.

MORRISON CHALLENGES GARDNER TO DEBATE

Also Replies To What He Describes As 'Most Unjust' Attack of Henry Page

Rockingham, June 19.—"If Mr. Gardner has any assault to make upon me I am willing and ready to meet him face to face any where at any time in North Carolina in joint debate upon any question, personal or otherwise," declared Cameron Morrison, while speaking before a crowded court room in the Person county court house this afternoon, when he answered statements made against him by Henry A. Page in introducing Gardner at Aberdeen Thursday night and denounced what he termed a "bitter and cruel fight" on the part of the Shelby candidate and his friends.

"I will stand my character for comparison against Mr. Gardner," declared Mr. Morrison, "but don't get away off and say things against me."

Mr. Morrison declared in opening his address that "until now I have refrained from engaging in any personal criticism of my opponent; I believe I can truthfully say that nothing has been said by me that would create bitter feeling or tend to divide the Democrats of North Carolina."

"But," he added, "recently I have been terribly provoked. Having won the nomination in fairness and kindness my opponent and his friends have begun one of the bitterest and cruelest fights on me."

With these remarks Mr. Morrison took up the introductory speech of Henry A. Page at Aberdeen on last Thursday night. "Mr. Page made a most unbrotherly and unjust attack," said the speaker.

"I have no reply to Mr. Page's charge as to my personal characteristics. His action places me in distinguished company. It has been only a few years since this gentleman made a vicious and brutal attack on Chief Justice Walter Clark. When Chief Justice Clark was nominated by the Democratic party he bolted the convention and set up another candidate. Nevertheless," continued Mr. Morrison, "the Democrats selected Chief Justice Clark overwhelmingly."

"A little later," he continued, "when President Wilson on recommendation of Senator Simmons and Overman appointed Hon. William C. Hammer district attorney, Mr. Page filed objections and assailed Mr. Hammer's character. Despite this abuse the appointment was confirmed and he has just been nominated for Congress by the people of Mr. Page's district."

"Mr. Page says he has been associated in various capacities with me for thirty years. I deny this. I have never had a business transaction with him in my life. He has never been in my home and I have never been in his. The only thing I have had to do with him was in hotels, on trains and other public places, and then I was amused by listening at his scoffing."

He concluded his remarks on this subject, before beginning his regular Democratic speech, with the statement that he has tried to conduct his campaign on a high plane, denouncing Mr. Gardner's attacks on him and calling upon Mr. Gardner to meet him face to face in debate if he wished to continue his attacks upon him.
