BUILDING TO BEGIN AT DUKE UNIVERSITY

Eleven New Buildings Now and the Old Ones Remodeled--To Be Turned Over to Girls After Erection of New Unit for Boys Across Railroad.

Durham Herald.

Eleven new buildings costing approximately $3,500,000 are to be erected on the present campus of Duke University and practically every old building on the campus will be remodeled under the plans adopted by the Duke interests, it was authoritatively learned yesterday.

The Herald has the pleasure of being the first newspaper to announce to the public the building plans for the greater Duke University. The information was secured from an authoritative and thoroughly reliable source.

On the Paschal place live several families of negroes. David Headen had previously charged George Brooks with being too intimate with his wife and had ordered him to stay away from his house.

Nothing has been ascertained of a definite nature regarding the type of architecture adopted nor of the manner of arrangement of the buildings on the campus.

At least $4,500,000 will be expended in building the first unit of the University, in the opinion of local contractors who have been awaiting with interest the letting of the contracts.

The contract for the erection of the first unit of 11 buildings will be let on the 14th of this month and work is expected to begin within a short time, as it is reliably stated that part of the buildings are scheduled to be completed in time for the opening of the next school term.

SILK MILL PREPARING TO BEGIN BUSINESS

DAVID HEADEN MURDERED

George Brooks, Colored, Charged with Crime.—George Craven and Will Matthews Held as Material Witnesses.

David Headen, a negro about forty years of age, was found murdered in the woods on the Matilda Paschal place about four miles west of Siler City Tuesday morning.

Coroner Brooks and the sheriff, informed of the find, hurried to the scene of the crime. At Siler City the following gentlemen were summoned as jurors for the coroner's inquest: M. M. Fox, H. J. Dixon, June Dark, Alston Brooks, V. B. Elkins, J. P. Esteridge and Dr. Thomas went along also.

George Brooks Charged with Crime. A number of witnesses were examined and the story was in effect as follows:

On the Paschal place live several families of negroes. David Headen had previously charged George Brooks with being too intimate with his wife and had ordered him to stay away from his house.

On last Friday evening Headen, Brooks and Will Matthews left the Headen home together to go to the home of George Craven, another negro, who lived about three-fourths of a mile distant.

On Tuesday morning, noting the indifference of the Headen woman and Brooks, Mr. Wade Paschal said that he believed Headen was dead in the woods, and commanded the negroes to go with him to look for him.

A witness testified that the bloody stick found was similar to one that Brooks carried when he left for Craven home with the other men.

Brooks at first denied knowing anything about it, and that the stick was his. Later he said it was his stick, but that George Craven had been standing near the road when he was in the woods and had said that he wanted Brooks to kill Headen.

Brooks, charged with the murder, was brought to Pittsboro and lodged in jail, and Craven and Matthews were jailed to be held as witnesses of material facts.

A Good Mother Passes Away

Bear Creek, Rt. 3, July 6.—Sarah Hadley, Hughes Cheek, of Bennett, died at her home Friday evening, June 26th 1925 at 11 o'clock.

Her body was found about 150 yards from the path, the signs indicating that it had been dragged from a place within a few steps of the road.

Brooks at first denied knowing anything about it, and that the stick was his. Later he said it was his stick, but that George Craven had been standing near the road when he was in the woods and had said that he wanted Brooks to kill Headen.

Her body was taken to Fall Creek the old family burying ground, and in the presence of a large concourse of people was laid to rest.

Dear Mother has gone and left us; Her voice we loved is still; A chair is vacant in our home That never can be filled.

PITTSBORO CELEBRATES FOURTH IN GREAT STYLE

Address of Maj. McLendon the Feature of the Occasion—Music, Races, and Ball Game—Dinner for Veterans

Pittsboro celebrated the Fourth in fine style. A big crowd composed of citizens from all over the county and outside communities were present to share the pleasures of the day.

The celebration was held under the of Durham, a comrade of many of the American Legion, with Commandant, D. L. Bell, master of ceremonies. The big feature of the day was the address by Major L. P. McLendon, of Durham, a comrade of many of the Chatham veterans of the World War, and much admired by them for his gallantry on the foreign field.

Major McLendon's theme was that of Liberty which the Revolutionary soldiers fought to establish and which soldiers of the other wars have sought to maintain, though it was not thus expressly worded.

He defined the weapons of war as MEN, and hoped that the time would never come when the country will not have men of sufficiently red blood to rise up and defend the liberty which has thus far been successfully maintained.

Major McLendon has a pleasant voice, speaks fluently, and is of fine platform presence. He was much complimented upon his fine address.

First, Mr. Bell called upon Mayor A. C. Ray to welcome the visitors in the name of the town of Pittsboro. The Mayor spoke very felicitously. He was followed by Mr. J. L. Griffin, who welcomed the people as a representative of the business interests of the town.

There were supposed to be three groups of veterans. The Spanish-American group, however, was a very small one, if it was discovered at all. There was a fine bunch of the old boys of the sixties here, hale and hearty for the most part, and able to enjoy the dinner provided for the veterans of all three of the more recent wars.

After dinner, the visiting band gave a musical concert, the races were pulled off, and the baseball game between the Pittsboro and New Hope teams had begun when the thunder and lightning and rain, gracious rain, stopped it.

Fellow after fellow manfully strove to climb the greasy pole and win the prize offered for the first to achieve the top, but no one succeeded.

All the veterans present were asked to register in a book in the office of the clerk of court, from which we gather the following names:

FRANK MURRAY VICTIM OF CIRCULAR SAW

Bennett Man Sawn Asunder at Baxter's Saw Mill—Other Bennett News.

The Fourth of July passed off very quietly here though a good many people came here. Some had heard that there was to be a celebration here. We had spoken of getting up a program but had about abandoned the idea this year. Those that came, with many met out in a nice grove and spread our dinner together and had an enjoyable time.

Among those from a distance who visited relatives and friends and remained over were Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Phillips, of Siler City, at the home of Mr. E. S. Phillips, Mr. Lacy Purvis, who holds a position with the New Ark shoe store of Florence, S. C., visited at his parents' Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Purvis; Mrs. Eli Scott and children of Greensboro, with relatives and friends; Mr. and Mrs. Frank White of Durham at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Andrews; Mrs. M. J. Presnell of Seagrove. Several from Bennett attended the celebrations at Asheboro and Randleman.

One of the saddest deaths occurred near here last Thursday afternoon when Frank Murray who was sawing at H. A. Baxter's sawmill became entangled with the saw carriage. The best we can learn from those who saw it was that while the log turner was rolling up a log Mr. Murray had a stick pushing dust down into the dust trough — by some way the carriage crept upon his right side and threw him back upon the carriage and before he or anyone else could get the carriage reversed it carried him to the circular saw, which ripped him open, beginning at his right side, cutting his left leg in two below the knee, and split his left foot open and cut the little toe off his right foot, but not marking either his face or hands. Dr. H. A. Denson was hurried to the place but the unfortunate man died instantly when he was struck by the saw. Mr. Murray had been living here for a good while, and for a long time had been engaged in the saw mill business and was well known throughout this vicinity. He is the son of Mr. James Murray, who lives here in the edge of town and is now confined to his bed very seriously ill with cancer of the head. The deceased was forty-seven years old, leaves a wife and six children, two boys about grown, Everett and Taft, two daughters Bertha and Mary—these by his first wife whom he married in 1904, Miss Jodie Edwards, who died March 28th, 1922. He later married Miss Sarah Ann Hayes, of this union he has twin boys, Melvin and Elvin. Mr. Murray was interred in the Pleasant Grove Christian church cemetery, with which church he united several years ago. Last Friday at least a thousand people attended this burial. The services were conducted by Rev. Will Allred, of Randleman.

While the cross tie business is some what dull at present, though better than a year ago, the lumber business is moving along very well. The merchants and other business men of the town too, are holding up very well. We hope that our business people will consider our future prospects for our town's interest and offer some inducements to other capitalists to come here and establish enterprises.

We need for one thing, among the stores, a big dry goods store that will carry a big line of men's and ladies ready-to-wear. Some concern would do well to come here and put in such a store. Then we need an up-to-date market here. Such a business would pay well, as we have to send to other towns to get our meats, etc., or depend on farmers' killing their beaves and bringing them to us, but an up-to-date market where meats are kept regularly could do a good business here.

Veteran T. Y. Mims has a heart. He stopped the editor on the street Saturday and said that though his subscription was not expired he wanted to pay another year now to help in pulling through this hard summer. Reference to the list showed that his paper was already paid up until next February.
