Commissioner C. C. Hamlet states definitely that he will not be a candidate for re-election. He has made a good commissioner, and despite a long term would have made a good run.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Connell left Sunday for a visit to relatives in their old county, Henderson. They were accompanied by Mr. K. A. Gien, who having finished up the work on Mr. J. J. Carroll's filing station and tourist cottages at the fork of 53 and 50 near Sanford, has gone to Hendersonville, where he has a job.

Mrs. C. W. Kissell and son Charles of Norfolk visited the former's sister, Mrs. B. A. Perry, during the week-end. Also Mrs. Perry, who was seen as visitors to her sisters, Mrs. Joe Gouston of Goldston and Mrs. D. E. McIver, and her son James and daughter Mrs. Curran Butler and husband of Raleigh.

The men's prayer meeting, which was successfully conducted 10 months every morning at nine o'clock at the court house until the bad winter weather set in, has been started again, the first meeting being held Monday morning.

Rev. A. C. Ray, Jr., preached very acceptably at the Methodist church, Sunday evening. The pastor has recently had an operation of his tonsils.

A car driven by Mr. Fred Seagraves, containing several passengers, is reported to have run off a bridge Saturday evening and gone into a ravine as deep as the car, but without any serious injury to any one.

CATCHING DISEASES

Diseases that are easily communicated from a sick to a well person are contagious ("catching") diseases. The most familiar of these, no doubt, are measles, mumps, whooping-cough, scarlet fever and diphtheria. Nature is the most relentless and cruel of all tyrants. Her laws are inexorable. In all nature there is constant warfare. The weeds smother the cotton if the weeds themselves are not destroyed. In the pond, the big fish eat the little fish. The dogs catch the rabbits and the cats catch the mice. The partridges eat the insects and the robins eat the worms.

"Great fleas have little fleas Upon their backs to bite 'em, And little fleas have lesser fleas, And so—ad infinitum. And the great fleas themselves, In turn, have greater fleas to go on; While these again have greater still, And greater still and so on."

In the microscopic world there are bacteria that prey on each other and bacteria that prey on the human host. Human beings must fight these bacteria that prey on the human host. Human beings must fight these bacteria or be overcome by them. Human beings fight bacteria naturally by nature's laws and also human beings may use their superior human intellect to aid in combating them.

When the virus causing smallpox gains entrance in the human body it immediately begins to grow and multiply and to eliminate the toxins which produce the symptoms called smallpox. When this happens nature at once sets to work to produce in the system a substance which will neutralize these poisons and also kill the virus. If nature is successful the patient gets well. If nature is unsuccessful, the patient dies. The fight is unto death. One or the other must be overcome.

Man's intelligence comes to the aid of nature by showing man how to aid nature to more efficiently prepare this antitoxin by means of vaccination. In some instances it is possible to prepare this antitoxin artificially outside of the human body. All contagious or "catching" diseases are caused by some species of bacteria and they are contagious because these bacteria are communicated in some manner from the sick to the well.

In most cases when the individual has had one attack of the disease and gets well, the natural antitoxin produced in the system to counteract that infection remains permanent and such persons is not likely to have that disease again.

This is just one more bit of evidence in support of an already sufficiently established fact, which applies to all other fields of activity as well as opera: It was proper enough to be precocious and daring when we ourselves were young, but now that we have grown old it is all wrong for the young girls of today to be the same. SENATOR GRADY IN FORMAL STATEMENT

Several months ago I received a number of requests from friends in our Judicial District urging that I become a candidate for the position of Solicitor. I gave these interested friends no answer and did not encourage the idea but as the months have gone by these requests have become more numerous and finally assumed a serious aspect from my point of view. There is no man in the county or district who is more acutely aware of his obligations to his friends than I am. Already they have placed me under everlasting obligations by the kindness they have shown me and the trust and confidence they have bestowed upon me and while the positions that have come to me have been those entailing a great sacrifice of time and money they have left me nevertheless under a very real obligation to them. In those positions I tried as best I could to serve the people of my county and district according to my best judgment and conscience.

A new opportunity of service opens itself up to me in the position of Solicitor. After very mature consideration I have decided that I would like to serve my county and district in this capacity if it met with their approval and it is on this basis entirely that I now announce my candidacy for this position. The law wisely made the term of the Solicitor four years and thereby relieved him of the necessity of making a campaign every two years. It has placed the same restriction on our Governor and I believe that no one questions the wisdom of this law. It relieves the officer or public servant of the necessity of trying to meet the obligations of his office and at the same time of carrying on a campaign for reelection. It presents a further opportunity in that it makes it possible to select your prosecuting officer from the various counties in the district and not confine the office to one county in the district for too long a period. This system moves the office about the district and as time passes offers the opportunity of relieving conditions in every section of the district which are best known to the people or officer living in that particular section. It adds to this it stimulates the interest of the people in the office and tends to keep the public conscience awakened to their responsibilities in the enforcement of the criminal law and the preservation of law and order.

Having been born in Wayne county and coming as a descendant of a long line of militant Democrats in that county; having lived practically all my life in Johnston county and having served both Johnston county and Wayne as a member of the State Senate; having scores of splendid friends all over the district who have pledged me their unqualified support and influence I am confident that I can and will be nominated in the primary. I am making my announcement first through the press but with the purpose just as soon as I can with the hope that I may have the encouragement of your personal assurance of support and cooperation. PAUL D. GRADY.

EGGS BRINGING IN A GOOD REVENUE TO THE FARMERS

Proper Care and Feeding Earn A Handsome Profit for Poultrymen

KEEP REGULAR RECORDS (From the Chapel Hill Weekly) The campaign for the better care and feeding of chickens, which has been carried on for the last two or three years by the agriculture teachers in the Chapel Hill school, has begun to show results in the good profits earned by the farmers from the sale of eggs.

Here is one example: Alex McIver, of the Bethlehem church section, about 12 miles west of here, has earned $600 in six months from the eggs laid by about 340 hens. This is at the rate of $30 a month for 100 hens.

In the month of February Malcolm Blackwood reported a profit of $68.37 from 150 hens, or at the rate of $45.58 to the 100 hens. Some of the other men reporting profits for that same month are: Jim Hawkins, $28.24 from 100 hens; John Hawkins, $25.15 from 104 hens; Walter Hawkins, $30.52 from 108 hens; Tom Riley, $25.13 from 82 hens; Walter Lloyd, $17.12 from 56 hens; Sam Ray, $47.16 from 133 hens; Charlie Stanford, $27.45 from 100 hens; D. S. Walker, $46.85 from 160 hens; S. E. Teer, $41.04 from 180 hens.

Of course prices vary a great deal during the year, but the agriculture teachers, R. P. Harris and G. H. Singleton, say that a poultryman who cares for and feeds his flock properly should not have any trouble making an average profit, through all seasons, of $25 a month for each 100 hens.

One of the important features of the better-poultry campaign has been the regular keeping of records by the farmers. There are now 26 men who keep track of the cost of feed and the amount received from sales, and who send in a report to Mr. Harris and Mr. Singleton at the end of every month. These reports are combined and tabulated, and a mimeograph sheet is issued monthly, showing what each poultryman has achieved.

In one month recently the total profits earned by these 26 men, after the deduction of feed cost, amounted to $804. Since their total number of hens was 3,500 the average profit per 100 hens for the month was $23. But the possibilities are better than this, because several of these 26 farmers had less than 100 hens, and the ratio of expense to revenue is greater when the flock is small.

At the bottom of the latest bulletin, showing the month's results, is this note: "Continue feeding hens well. High pro-
