PUSH BUTTON RUNS HUGE CATTLE RANCH

Successors to Texas Pioneer Use Electricity.

Menard, Texas.—Otto Carlin lighted a new oil lamp, drew water with a pump, examined one of the new iron nails which were rapidly displacing the old wooden pegs, and thought it was progress. But he kept a few of the old candles on hand and preserved the old oaken bucket for safety. That was 1877, and the place was the famous 100,000-acre Las Moras ranch. Otto's assignees and descendants now press a button. Magic lamps glow, meals cook, chickens hatch, pumps draw water, saws cut wood, sheep are clipped, refrigerators refrigerate, grinders grind, and waffle irons waffle. They just push a button.
Electricity also is transforming the cattle ranches.

Life Moves Faster Now.
Life moves with a swifter tempo on the land which Otto Carlin blocked out 50 years ago. Otto would not know the place.
Tolling up the valley of the Colorado river from Austin, Texas, in the summer of 1877, an ox train forded the clear stream of the Llano and, drawing up at a spot on the San Sabariver in Menard county, deposited a cargo of lumber and square pointed nails. Out of these Carlin built his ranch house in the desolate waste that was then West Texas.

Recently the old house was razed and on its site, made out of some of its own timbers, stands a ranch house of a new type—a spreading bungalow with wide porches and spacious rooms, hardwood floors and oak fittings. And beside each polished door is an electric light switch.
A strange thing mounted on a truck, having long limber arms, comes along on Las Moras ranch these days. It is a moving "barber shop" equipped to "bob" sheep electrically. Otto Carlin used to truss a sheep up with buckskin thong and harvest the wool with a clumsy pair of shears, one clip at a time. Now the twinkling blades of the sheep barber can turn out 150 hair cuts a day each. An expert hand clipper, working at top speed, cannot do more than 50.

Electricity Does It.
Descendants of Otto Carlin's dairy cows munch food cut by electric ensilage cutters, give their milk to an electric milking machine and are comforted by an electric fan which drives away the flies. Mother hens can play barnyard bridge, while an electric incubator hatches their chickens and an electric brooder raises them. Horses are branded by electric irons and clipped by electric clippers, while electric irons of a different type curl the maid's hair and iron the men's shirts.
Las Moras ranch does not stretch so far away into the sunset as it formerly did, because the 100,000 acres has dwindled to 19,000. But this curtailed acreage produces more wealth than the original 100,000 did.
Charles L. Martin owns the place, and his four sons, college trained, operate it. They have installed almost every modern mechanical device known in farm operations.

Witches Being Sought in German Community

Leipzig, Germany.—Belief in witchcraft and sorcery still persists in some parts of rural Germany. A wave of the old superstition has been sweeping the little hamlet of Wreschenode, near Gauersheim, and while there have been no burnings at the stake, life has been made miserable for several unfortunate suspects, both men and women.
An automobile was wrecked near the house of a supposed witch, and it was excitedly charged that the witch had caused the accident by expectorating on the roadway just before the car passed. When a young girl was taken ill it was averred she had been bewitched and she was shut in a dark room for three days while incantations were chanted periodically to exorcise the evil spirits. Outside the house door armed men stationed themselves with the hope of catching the evil ones, but it is not recorded that any were caught.

Bottle Yields Sailor's Farewell 40 Years Ago

Halifax, N. S.—A farewell message from John Lee, master mariner, to his widowed mother, believed to have floated around the world in a bottle for nearly forty years, has been received here.
The bottle was picked up in the Baltic Sea at the Island of Borkum by a young German cable engineer and forwarded to the Premier of Nova Scotia. It read: "To whom it may concern: Tell mother I died fighting. John Lee, Master Mariner, Halifax." It was dated "May 17, '37."
The paper was faded gray and the writing very faint, but legible. Mrs. Lee died 35 years ago. The fate of her son's ship, which sailed from this port, was never known.

CHASE ADDRESSES ALUMNI MEETING; CONFERENCE ENDS

Grads Pledge Support to Program of University—Chase Points Out Needs.

GRANT SURVEYS WORK (From the Tar Heel)

The second annual conference of the General Alumni Association drew to a close last Saturday afternoon after a two-day period of intensive work on the part of the delegates. Interest ran high throughout all sessions and before disbanding the alumni voted to make the conference an annual affair.
Following the dramatic appeal by President Chase, characterized by its favor and earnestness, in which he gave emphatic warning that the State's University, now recognized as a leader among other universities throughout the country, will be forced to take a second rate position unless its legitimate needs for itemized in its budget requests, are met properly, the alumni pledged themselves to support every request for appropriations the University has made of the next legislature and expressed complete confidence in the stewardship of its President.
"The time has come when the people of North Carolina have to make up their mind as to what kind of University they want, and I don't believe for one moment that they will be content with a second-rate university," President Chase declared.

Must Carry On
"The University today cannot measure its needs in terms of student enrollment alone. The institution will be caught up with the current needs of its building program if its present request is granted, but the maintenance program is a thing that must go on. The University is away behind in its equipment. Our Library spent $20,000 for books last year, and Harvard spent $159,000 during the same period. Yale University announced an endowment campaign the other day for twenty million dollars and yet that will not go to take care of increased student enrollment. Our faculty has been harried recently by tempting offers from other institutions. Greenlaw and Ferson and Snell have gone and L. R. Wilson and Archibald Henderson have stayed at a personal financial sacrifice."
There was every indication at the conference that the alumni and other interested friends of the University will carry their fight for appropriations to the floor of the Legislature if necessary.
Secretary Grant cited the $275,000 gift by William S. Kenan for a stadium as an inspiration to further gifts. "Alumni in the north and west already have that habit firmly fixed. A wealthy man who dies in California, for instance, without leaving the state university a nice portion of his estate is considered somewhat of a disgrace. A constitution was adopted by the delegates providing for a change in the system of electing officers of the General Alumni Association."

1926 Again Chevrolet's Greatest Year

In 1925 Chevrolet astonished the automotive world by attaining an annual production never before reached by any manufacturer of gearshift automobiles.
Thus, for two years in succession, Chevrolet has broken all its previous records and has set a new mark in automotive history.
This splendid achievement results from a steadfast adherence to the fundamental Chevrolet policy of building a car of the finest possible quality to sell at a low price.
That the vast majority of buyers demand a car of this type—and that Chevrolet has been successful in building such a car—possessing the highest degree of smooth performance, smart appearance, and economical operation—is proved by Chevrolet's success during the year now drawing to a close.
